A Few News Items
"Ma" in Oblivion
Suppose Britain Says No
Dictators Get Results

By Arthur Brisbane

CLOSE TOGETHER, in one newspaper, you read these items, on a happy Sunday morning:

"Bandits get $17,1[illegible] on New Jersey bus. Shoot hole in roof, slug bank messenger, cow 15 passengers. Driver, with revolver pressed against head by one of pair of bandits speeds through Union City."

And there are at least 100 other, similar "news items," in one day's news. Our crime wave is a disgrace to the nation, and, born of bootlegging, covers the entire country.

It has become an issue considerably more important than prohibition.

An exciting, bitter contest for governor, in Texas, of interest to the rest of the country, is settled.

Mrs. Ferguson, former governor, whose husband is also a former governor, has been put out of the running, almost 2 to 1, by Ross S. Sterling, newspaper publisher, of Houston.

Mrs. Ferguson, former governor, told audiences they would have "two governors for the price of one," meaning that he would help his wife govern.

Mrs. Ferguson promised that she would pardon all imprisoned violators of the prohibition law. A pledge to release 2000 convicts as a vote getting measure shows that Texas is not unanimous for prohibition.

Britain and France agree to work for restriction in war expense as well as in the size of armaments. Britain fears that economies agreed on at the London parley may be lost in the effort to get more expensive QUALITY in armaments while limiting QUANTITY.

Poor old Britain finds herself more tightly pinched for money than the French, or even the Italians, or at least, less willing to spend it.

"We've got the men, we've got the ships, we've got the money, too," must be rewritten to leave out "money."

If Britain decides to limit cost, as well as SIZE of armaments, and we obediently "string along," as usual, we shall not have much armament.

Our patriots do not give their dear government very much for a dollar. One billion in Europe will easily buy, in real defensive value, as much as two billions here.

We, of course, "have got the money" now. But, what if Britain should send for a gathering of our mush and milk experts from Washington, and tell them we must not SPEND THE MONEY, BECAUSE THEY, THE BRITISH, CANNOT AFFORD IT.

A dictatorship, while it lasts, creates efficiency. You see it in the French revolution, men in stovepipe hats, dominating battlefields of Europe. You see it in the careers of Cromwell and Napoleon.

And you see it again today in Russia, Italy and Turkey, three nations progressing amazingly, because dictatorship and revolution sweep aside tradition.

At the great Belfast automobile race on Saturday three Italian racers came in first, second and third, two Britishers fourth and fifth. Several Britishers and one Italian were injured in the race.

Mussolini takes personal charge of Italian industries and tells his people they must never be satisfied with what they have accomplished.

In addition, men of Latin blood seem to do certain dangerous and difficult things better than northerners, which is sad for proud Nordics.

Women with pet parrots should know that "man probably contracts the disease by way of the nose and mouth." Burying your face in the soft feathers of a parrot is dangerous. And that is true of the feathers, or fur of any animal.

British scientists say our earth is sometimes surrounded by a ring of electricity, as Saturn is surrounded by rings. Our occasional "ring" causes electric storms that upset cable, telegraph and radio operations

BIG BUSINESS WILL BOOST BOSTON DAY

Mayor Curley Told Everyone Is Ready to Help; May Be Half-Holiday

The support and co-operation of business men throughout the city in observance of Boston's 300th birthday on Sept. 17, was pledged to Mayor Curley today at a luncheon in the City club.

Mayor Curley was host at the luncheon and secured from the business men unanimous agreement to solicit other business men and request them to close for a half holiday on the 17th.

On that day the feature event will be a huge parade with more than 35,000 in line, and a throng of spectators estimated at between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 expected to be along the route.

Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald presided at the luncheon, attended by 150 representatives of Hub business organizations, and Mayor Curley was the principal speaker.

He announced that the Mayor and other officials of Boston, Eng., as well as mayors of every city in Canada, and Dominion officials, have been invited to take part in celebrating Boston Week.

The mayor announced that on the day before Boston's birthday, a permanent memorial to the founders of Boston will be dedicated on the Beacon st. side of the Common.

BANDITS KILL A SOCIETY YOUTH

Cleveland, O., Aug. 25 (AP)—A gay party of young folks from many of Cleveland's prominent families ended early today in a melee with hold-up men and the fatal shooting of one guest.

Miller Wilkinson, 23, a Princeton University senior, led a group of young men in resisting five robbers armed with rifles and pistols, and was shot in the head after police arrived and engaged in a gun battle with the intruders. Wilkinson was the son of Fred F. Wilkinson, securities broker.

The party was given at the home of Ray S. Dunham, one of the city's best-known realtors, for friends of his son, Donald. About 40 persons were present.

The elder Dunham said he was in the kitchen when his son ran in, shouting:

"You guys are afraid to shoot. Why don't you start something?" Wilkinson was taunting the robbers, Dunham said.

One man raised a rifle as if to fire and Wilkinson grappled with him. At the same time the other guest seized the remaining gunmen and a free-for-all fight started.

Two of the robbers were shot in the leg. A third was picked up soon afterward.

Washington, Aug. 25 (AP)—The American embassy at Lima, Peru, advised the State department today that Captain Grow of the American Naval Mission to Peru was captured by Revolutionists at Camana yesterday.

Lieut. Com. Harold B. Grow of the Naval Reserve was the naval officer taken. He holds the title of captain in the Peruvian army.

Grow resigned from active status in the Navy two years ago to accept an appointment as director general of the Peruvian air forces. Although working with the United States Naval Mission to Peru, he was not attached to it because of his civilian status.

He resigned in consequence of a revolt begun in Arequipa last week under the leadership of Lieut. Col. Sanchez Cerro, and today the Peruvian government was under control of a military junta.

Leguia heard his last ovation only yesterday. At a race track he entered the official stand, filled with prominent Peruvians and diplomats from Bolivia, Venezuela Ecuador and Chile, and this group began an ovation.

At night his period of glory was over. A new government went in and he went out.

WELCOME FOR AL SMITH PLANNED BY WOMEN

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

A big "victory" welcome to former Governor "Al" Smith is being planned by Democratic women all over the State when he comes to Massachusetts following the primary, in the interests of Democratic success here.

The work of organizing the women into Dolly Madison Clubs and Women's Democratic Clubs is being pushed vigorously by Miss Mary H. Ward from the Democratic State Committee headquarters. She has the enthusiastic support of Chairman Frank J. Donahue.

Bridge, teas and lawn parties were scheduled and state and national women of prominence will be brought in for interesting chats at meetings to be held by the various clubs.

WOMEN ARE INTERESTED

In commenting on her work today, Miss Ward said:

"The ghost of the old fallacy that the women of the Democratic party cannot be bothered with politics or voting has been laid away forever.

"It's in the same political grave with that other time-worn chestnut about Democratic administrations always bringing hard times.

"The Democratic women of this State are essentially homemakers, and nothing is farther from our minds than to change their status. We found them capable in the last presidential campaign, however, of deep interest in things political when a candidate of the caliber of ex-Governor Smith was presented to them."

Reverting to the Democratic hard times fallacy, Miss Ward said:

MISERY OF HARD TIMES

"Do not, if you value your safety, try that one over again on any woman who has just lived through the misery of 1929 and 1930 with half her family out of work entirely and the other half employed only part time, while she juggles the domestic budget trying to achieve the impossible task of stretching one dollar into three.

"She is oftener a keener judge

HELEN C. IRVING ALAN NICOLL

CROSSES OCEAN TO MARRY

A sudden attack of shyness on the part of both the prospective bride and groom caused a postponement today of a wedding scheduled to take place on the deck of the White Star liner Cedric, when that vessel docked at Commonwealth Pier.

With the license in his pocket, Alan Nicoll, of 18 Newell rd., Auburndale, was at the pier, waving to his childhood sweetheart, Miss Helen Irving, of Dundee, as the liner was warped into her berth.

The couple had not met in nine years. The crowd of several hundred passengers and friends of passengers who gathered around them to witness the ceremony was too much for them, and they hurriedly decided to be married later, probably Saturday evening, at Nicoll's home.

Hyde Returns From Drouth Inspection

Washington, Aug. 25 (AP)—Secretary Hyde, chairman of the National Drouth Relief committee, returned today from an inspection tour of the stricken area near Washington and the upper Ohio valley and prepared to report to President Hoover. The secretary indicated he would have something to say later today concerning conditions.

MAYOR INVITES FLIERS HERE

Urging a Boston visit, Mayor Curley dispatched a message to Baron Wolfgang von Gronau and his three associate fliers today at Queensport, N. S., inviting a stop here in behalf of 500 business men.

The fliers landed at that port on an unheralded flight from Germany to New York. They were forced down yesterday through lack of fuel.

Learning that fuel had been rushed from Halifax and had reached the fliers during the night, the mayor wired his invitation and included a statement on the facilities of the airport here. Mayor Curley's message read:

"More than 500 business men of Boston, assembled at the Boston City Club for a luncheon at 1 p. m., would esteem it an honor to welcome you to Boston today.

"A landing may be made at East Boston on the finest airport in New England."

The 1 o'clock luncheon was arranged in order to complete final preparations for Boston Day, Sept. 17, that will feature the biggest parade in the history of Boston.

The arrival of the fliers, with a landing here, would afford the citizens of Boston a greater opportunity to realize their airport as a connecting link for long distance flights, the mayor said.

German Aviators Twice Are Forced Down in Nova Scotia by the Foggy Weather

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 25 (AP)—The German seaplane, carrying Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau, German aviator, and his crew of three from Germany to New York, arrived at Halifax today after a 180-mile one-stop flight from Queensport, N. S.

The fliers, who landed at the fishing village of Marie Joseph, some 75 miles east of Halifax this morning, to make sure of their directions in a dense fog, took off from the village at 12:15 p. m., guided by a Moth pilot plane of the Halifax Flying Club and reached Halifax a few minutes before 1:30, Boston daylight saving time.

Fuel and supplies awaited the German crew here, and it planned to go on to New York by way of New England, probably tomorrow.

The plane took off from Queensport for Halifax at 8:50 a. m., Boston time today.

The fliers landed at Queensport, 180 miles from Halifax, at 3:45 p. m., Boston time, yesterday. They had flown 600 miles from Cartwright Bay, Labrador, in six hours and 45 minutes. It was fog that forced them down at Queensport.

STARTED AUG. 18

The aviators left the Island of Sylt in the North Sea on their transatlantic flight last Monday, Aug. 18, keeping their destination secret. They flew to the Faroe Islands and thence to Reykjavik, Iceland. There they announced they would return to Germany, where Capt Von Gronau is chief of a commercial air service school.

Friday the plane left Reykjavik, but chose a course toward Greenland instead of toward Germany and after reporting position occasionally by radio, landed at Ivitut, Greenland, in the afternoon. Fuel had been sent on there and Saturday morning the plane took off and continued to Cartwright Bay, Labrador. The start from Cartwright Bay for the American continent was made at 9 a. m., Sunday morning, Boston time.

FOURTH WESTWARD FLIGHT

This is the fourth westward flight over the North Atlantic. Two of the three flights, however, were non-stop crossings. They were that of the Bremen, carrying Capt. Herman Koehl, Baron von Huenfeld and Col. James Fitzmaurice, and that of the Southern Cross, captained by Wing Comdr. Charles Kingsford-Smith. The first ended at Greenley Islands, Labrador, and the second at St. John's, Newfoundland. The first crossing was by U. S. airmen on their world girdling flight.

PLANE FAILS TO RELEASE TOW LINE

Kenneth Carr's Skull Believed Fractured; 2 Pacific Derbies Reach Chicago Today

Chicago, Aug. 25 (AP)—Kenneth Carr of Detroit suffered a possible fracture of the skull today when a glider in which he was giving a demonstration nose-dived and crashed at the national air races.

Carr's glider, a Franklin PS-2 type, failed to release from the tow line with which it was being snapped into the air.

Pilots and planes were accelerated by the command. Everywhere it was speed and the eyes of thousands snapped around the five-mile race course at the Curtiss-Reynolds airport.

CLASSIC SET FOR TUESDAY

Gladys O'Donnell, who has led the "powder puff" dash since it left her home airport at Long Beach, Cal., was assured of victory, barring mishap. She had an elapsed time lead of more than five hours over Mildred Morgan, Beverly Hills, Cal., at the last-leg takeoff from Madison, Wis., this morning.

John Blum, Seattle, held only a 20-minute elapsed time lead over Nick Namer, the Spokane "Sun God" pilot, at the takeoff of the men's Pacific deby in St. Paul.

The take-off of the non-stop speed classic from Los Angeles has been tentatively set for tomorrow, dependent upon the weather. Adverse winds, the weather man said, probably would continue until nightfall.

AFTER HAWKS' MARK

Mrs. Phoebe Omlie still led the women's Dixie derby at the take-off from Memphis, her home port, today.

Today was women's day, and to cap it off Amelia Earhart, transatlantic flier, was to arrive. Several of the events this afternoon were for women pilots.

Mrs. O'Donnell Far Ahead in Air Derby

Milwaukee, Aug. 25 (AP)—Gladys O'Donnell, Long Beach, Cal., led the quintet of women derbyites on the Long Beach to Chicago race into Milwaukee, next to the last control point, today. She made the hop from Madison, Wis., in 31 minutes 26 seconds.

Mrs. O'Donnell landed at 11:02 a. m., C. D. T. Her elapsed time from the California city was announced as 14 hours 43 minutes 6 seconds, approximately six hours ahead of her nearest competitor.

Hoover Back From Camp in Mountains

Washington, Aug. 25 (AP)—Invigorated by the brisk air of the Virginia mountains President Hoover returned to Washington today again to plunge into study of many problems for which he is seeking early solution.

and may be responsible for tornadoes.

Tornadoes travel slowly, if you think one is coming, remember that your automobile can save you. The weather bureau says tornadoes travel, always, in a straight line, usually in a northeast, or southeast direction always toward the east.

Put your family in the car and start at right angles to the tornado. Do not run away ahead of it. It never turns to right or left and is not very wide. That is all you need to know.

In the early eighties, when Col. Coates, running through his Kansas City hotel, "The Coates House," warned all his guests to take to the cyclone cellar, the beautiful and brave Miss Cora Baker, of St. Louis, observed that the yellow cyclone funnel had climbed the steep riverbank above the hotel. She chartered a two-horse hack, with a young man from the East, and drove after the cyclone, observing its effects, cutting houses in two, lifting up sidewalks, etc. It did not come back and paid no attention to her, which is more than you could say of any man in Kansas City or St. Louis.

Bartender 'Planted' to Get Him, Says Breen

Police liquor raiders "planted" an alleged bartender on his premises, it was charged today by David J. Breen at the close of a hearing on a padlock petition filed by Police Commissioner Hultman, who seeks to have Breen's place at 358A Tremont st. closed for a year.

The hearing was before David A. Marshall, sitting as a master appointed by the Superior Court to hear the facts in the case.

Several policemen, some of them former members of the liquor squad headed by Oliver B. Garrett, fugitive ex-policeman, testified to making arrests at Breen's.

One of those arrested was named Joseph E. Crane, charged with keeping and exposing liquor for sale, according to today's testimony.

From Sergt. William McKenzie, Bernard J. Killion, counsel for Breen, wrung the admission that Breen shouted at the raiders: "You can't push that man (Crane) in here."

Asked later about the incident, Breen, who has not yet appeared as a witness, explained he threatened to punch Crane in the nose and that Crane said:

Representing the polic commissioner, Assistant Corporation Counsel Leo Schwartz offered documentary proof of three convictions for liquor law violations at the Tremont st. place.

It is understood Federal agents will be presented as police witnesses at resumption of the hearing tomorrow.

Other police witnesses who appeared today, in addition to Sergt. McKenzie, were Lieut. James O'Neil and Patrolmen Henry LaCroix and Daniel J. Welby.

The present case is Commissioner Hultman's retort to action launched by Breen and his partner, James I. Harmon, who asked an injunction against further police raids. Master Marshall heard the facts in that case and a decision by the court is pending.

greatly interested in the scientific and commercial aspects of flying and of this trip. He commented that each year his flying school sponsored one long air trip. The journey last year to Iceland proved very profitable in meteorological information and flight data.

Besides Capt. von Gronau there are aboard the ship Edward Zimmer, aviation student; Franz Hack, mechanic, and a wireless operator named Albrecht. All were attached to the flying school at Warnemuende, Germany.

Von Gronau Credited With Seaplane Improvements

Berlin, Aug. 25 (AP)—Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau who heads the flying expedition that has just crossed the North Atlantic is 37 years old. He entered the navy in 1911 and devoted himself exclusively to seaplane flying. At the end of the world war he had been risen to the rank of first lieutenant. As head of the commission charged with trying out new seaplanes he is credited by experts with many advances in German seaplane construction.

Asst. Pilot Edouard Zimmer is 26 years old. He was graduated recently from the Commercial Pilots school of the Island of Sylt of which Gronau is the head teacher. Zimmer hails from Darmstadt.

Favors North Atlantic Route for Regular Flights

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 25 (AP)—To Canadian aviation authorities the flight of Capt. Wolfgang Von Gronau seems to prove conclusively the feasibility of the North Atlantic air route as the one that eventually will be adopted between North America and Europe for regular passenger and freight use.

A group of English explorers is row in the Canadian Arctic gathering data on this air route with the intention of inaugurating a regular service to Canada.

Will Fly to New York, Says Cable From Germany

New York, Aug. 25 (AP)—The Dornier Company of America received a cablegram from Germany today saying that Capt. Von Gronau would fly to New York from Halifax.

Company officials said the ship must land on water and that it probably will descend at either North Beach, L. I., or near the Battery.

"More than 500 business men of Boston, assembled at the Boston City Club for luncheon at 1 p. m., would esteem it an honor to welcome you to Boston. A landing may be made at East Boston, the finest airport in New England."—Mayor Curley's message to German fliers.

10 GO TO JAIL IN VICE CLEANUP; 182 TAKEN

Hultman's Surprise Raid Biggest Yet; More Cases Will Come Later

Forty-five defendants faced Judge Adlow in municipal court today, the result of the biggest liquor and vice cleanup since Commissioner Hultman took office.

The arrests totaled 182 in 27 raids, but the liquor charges, other than drunkenness, were continued for analysis of the liquor.

Of the 45 arrested for drunkenness, nine were given sentences of five to ten days each, one was sent to the State Farm at Bridgewater and two were placed on probation. The rest of the cases were placed on file.

In all, 138 persons were arrested for drunkenness over the week-end, 20 for liquor law violations and 24 on gambling charges. Many of these were arraigned in various district courts on the drunkenness and gambling charges and a score or more were fined.

Sergt. William Harrow led the in-town squad on its quest for liquor, the raids taking place at Bunker Hill and Decatur sts., Charlestown, and several places in the South End.

East Boston and Roxbury raids netted various quantities of liquor, including some seized from two alleged "hippers" in Rochester st., South End. In South Boston a squad led by Sergt. William Cripps made a score of raids that netted wine, beer and moonshine.

FEAR VERMONT BOY KIDNAPED

Colebrook, Ct., Aug. 25 (AP)—Fears that Kenneth Swanson, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Swanson of Barre, Vt., had been kidnaped were expressed today after an all-night search through woods and swamplands for the little boy.

Kenneth was last seen shortly before noon Sunday playing with his collie in the yard of his grandfather's home here. When the mother went to call him for dinner, Kenneth has disappeared and the dog, too, was gone.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Kennette, caretakers of the farm at which Mrs. Swanson was staying, told police that they had seen a suspicious looking car in the neighborhood for a few days preceding Kenneth's disappearance.

Parachute Lowers a Plane to Earth in Emergency Test

Detroit, Aug. 25 (AP)—A parachute device to bring airplanes safely to the ground in emergency cases, operated successfully in a test conducted here today.

The apparatus lowered a plane from a height of 2000 feet over Grosse Ile Airport. The plane went down easily and finally dropped into a tree. However, it was only slightly damaged and the pilot, Warren Smith, was not hurt.

TAMMANY CLUB MEETING

Politicians were today discussing the significance of the guest list at the Ward 8 Tammany Club meeting. Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, of course, has the backing of Mayor Curley, but they are wondering if the list showed a further preference of the mayor.

Those who attended the meeting, or were represented were, in addition to Fitzgerald, Charles S. Murphy for lieutenant governor; former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell for U. S. senator; William J. Foley, for district attorney. There were others present for various minor positions.

The president of the club is Daniel J. Gillen, a Curley lieutenant. Also present was the Mayor's brother, City Treasurer John J. Curley.

NEXT CONGRESS TO SEE MANY NEW FACES

18 Republicans and 8 Democrats Either Retire or Meet Defeat at Polls

Washington, Aug. 25 (AP)—At least 26 new faces will appear in the House of the 72d Congress as the result of voluntary and involuntary retirement of present members.

Fifteen Republicans and seven Democrats have relinquished their seats or announced their intention to do so at the end of the present Congress, while three Republicans and one Democrat have been forced out through defeat in primaries.

Of the voluntary departures, six of the majority and one of the minority were occasioned by senatorial nominations.

Ruth Hanna McCormick, after serving one House term, has been nominated by Illinois Republicans for the Senate. Representatives White, of Maine, Dickinson, of Iowa, and Pritchard, of North Carolina, also have been selected Republican Senatorial choices, in their states. Cordell Hull, of Tennessee, is the lone Democrat nominated for a place in the Senate.

Representatives Fort of New Jersey, and Sproul, of Kansas, Republicans, were defeated, the former by Ambassador Dwight Morrow and the latter by Senator Allen.

The involuntary retirement list, which may be increased in late primaries, now consists of Representatives Sears, of Nebraska, Chalmers, of Ohio, and Michaelson, of Illinois, Republicans, and Box, of Texas, Democrat.

A desire to re-enter the business world, old age, long public service and purely personal matters have been given as reasons for the voluntary retirements.

Labor Chiefs Hurl Sarcasm at Royal Baby

Glamis, Scotland, Aug. 25 (AP)—Attention paid to the baby of the Duchess of York has excited sarcastic comment by left-wing laborites. Comparisons are made between the lot of Royal infants and that of poverty-stricken subjects.

At the annual Keir Hardie Memorial demonstration at Cumnock, Ayrshire, Miss Mary Shennon, Laborite, said the Royal baby "would never have to face the question of living on five, three or two shillings a week."

THESE PICTURES were made by the Hearst Metrotone and Fox Movietone cameraman aboard the U. S. navy submarine S-22 off New London and are the most remarkable photos ever made under water. They depict from start to finish, the severe tests given the "lungs" invented by Lieut. Charles Momsen of the navy, when 10 men, including Momsen, "escaped" from the submarine which is submerged off New London. The test proved conclusively that men trapped in sunken subs, if equipped with the "lungs" of course, may easily escape death in the depths of the sea.

RUN ON REEF, BAIL AN HOUR FOR LIVES

Found by Coast Guard Cutter; All Are Taken Off and Brought Ashore

Eleven men and two youths, members of a Knights of Columbus fishing party, today owe their lives to the coast guard after a thrilling rescue from a reef in the lower harbor between Calf's Island and Great Brewster.

Their plight was one of a week-end series of water mishaps that provided many thrills along the New England coast and caused one death in Rhode Island.

Clad in lifebelts, the amateur fishermen, who were guests of James E. Hayes Council of Dorchester, were finally landed at Murray's boat yard, Freeport st., Dorchester, by patrol boat CG-2336 from the Ctiy Point lifesaving station.

ATTEMPTED RESCUE

The party included Cornelius Mahoney of 11 Parkman st., Dorchester, skipper of the 35-foot craft; John J. Dias of 86 Adams st., Paul T. Burke of 11 Fenton st., Joseph F. Nolan of 114 Bowdoin st., William J. Grindley of 83 Adams st., George F. Stanley of 95 Adams st., Gus O'Connor of 25 Oakley st., John Bogue of 21 Cushing Hill ave., Arthur Adler of 1396 Dorchester ave., all of Dorchester; Peter A. Hayes, Jr., of 21 Line st., Cambridge, and John Jicobbe, Philip Gabrunas and George J. Larsen, whose addresses were not learned.

While cruising off Boston Light, the group sighted a craft signalling for aid off Calf's Island and turned their cabin motorboat Comet to pick them up.

Meanwhile, the other boat which contained five men and bore the name Alice, with registration 846-E, had made a haven at Calf's Island.

On the Comet, an hour of frantic bailing followed until the patrol boat, in command of Capt. Frank Holbrook, hove in sight, narrowly escaping mishap itself in trying to reach the stranded craft. A high wind and heavy surf added to the danger.

CRAFT TOWED IN

All but Dias, Burke and Nolan were taken aboard the CG-2336, the trio being left on the Comet to bail, in an effort to keep her afloat.

In the water, to their hips, they kept the craft afloat, while the patrol boat hauled her into the Freeport st. yard.

Another coast guard rescue was recorded at Portsmouth, N. H., where three fishermen were picked up after a drift of 60 hours in a disabled boat.

They were Antonio Raduano, Cimino Antonio and Rafari Cino of Portland, aboard the 35-foot motor boat S. Leonard II.

RECEIVER FOR PAGE & SHAW FILES BOND

Bankruptcy Official Will Take Over the Duties of Man Named by State Court

With the filing of a bond of $5000 with the federal referee in bankruptcy for the faithful performance of his duty, Atty. Bartholomew A. Brickley, recently appointed in the U. S. Court receiver of the Page & Shaw, Inc., manufacturers of candy, will begin the work of going over the accounts of the concern shortly, it was learned today.

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed by the Page & Shaw, Inc., officials with the clerk of the United States Court, showing liabilities of $300,000 and assets close to $200,000. It was as a result of this that Referee in Bankruptcy Arthur Black, following a protracted hearing, appointed Brickley receiver for the corporation.

Appointment of the latter has made it mandatory on the part of Atty. Hugh D. McLellan, appointed by the Superior Court on June 10 as receiver for the corporation on the part of the State, to file an immediate report of his transactions.

"I expect to complete my work as receiver of the Page & Shaw, Inc., and file a report in Suffolk county courthouse shortly," said Atty. McLellan. "I shall then turn over to Mr. Brickley, federal receiver, all papers, etc. I might add that the district attorney of Middlesex county has the names of stockholders and other data dealing with the affairs of Page & Shaw, Inc."

Otis E. Dunham of Beverly, and 17 other officials and salesmen of the company, were indicted by a Middlesex grand jury in May, in connection with alleged irregularities in the sale of $2,000,000 worth of stock.

In Real Mother Role

LAWRENCE MEN DEFY FOG, FLY

Despite fog down along the coast, five members of the Wisemen club from Lawrence flew from Boston to Wikesbarre, Penn., today to attend the annual convention of that organization.

STORK VISITS FILM STAR

Los Angeles, Aug. 25—Norma Shearer, noted film actress, who added another role—the real one of motherhood—to her career yesterday, was reported doing well following the birth of an eight-pound son.

Miss Shearer in private life is Mrs. Irving Thalberg. Her husband is an executive of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, where she is a star. The couple have been married since 1927.

Norma was born in Montreal, Canada, and started her career in New York. She departed from her home with the intention of entering the movies but with little prospect. Upon arrival in New York she registered at every agency she knew of and was finally chosen over a group of 35 girls in an interview with theater magnates.

SHIP PLANE OFF TO JOIN LINER

The French flying boat, which brought mail from the Ile de France 300 miles off Boston, left the airport today to rejoin the liner in New York harbor.

Piloted by Louis Doumergue, with Albert Saladain as radio operator, the big craft circled the field several times as a farewell salute, then disappeared in the direction of New York.

It was catapulted from the Ile de France yesterday, and covered the 300 miles in three hours, bringing ten pounds of first class mail for Boston and New York. The flying boat should reach New York as the liner is getting through Quarantine.

YANKEE IS EVEN CHOICE AS CUP DEFENDER

Boston-Owned Craft Ranked Even With the Enterprise for Honor of Racing Shamrock

Newport, R. I., Aug. 25—Fog today caused a temporary postponement of the start of the third set of trial races in the selection of one boat to defend America's cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V.

When the air clears, Enterprise and Yankee are expected to be matched with Whirlwind opposing Weetamoe.

The two previous trials have virtually put Whirlwind out of the running and relegated the Morgan yacht, Weetamoe, to a secondary position, and the clash between Vanderbilt's Enterprise and Boston's Yankee may go a long way toward settling the issue.

The title "battle of billions" has been slapped on the races here as a result of disclosures showing that the four boats represent an investment of no less than $3,500,000 and, further, that the Vanderbilt and Morgan groups, at least, have set no limit on the ends to which they are willing to go to win.

As an example of the expense involved, report has it that Harold S. Vanderbilt, skipper of Enterprise, has six mainsails costing $13,000 each and 16 jibs.

The duck sail market and the bronze plate market are said to have been cornered by the millionaire syndicates, this serving to put Yankee and Whirlwind at a disadvantage.

Vanderbilt is understood to have paid $44,000 for his mast and another $5000 to transport his duralumin sail trolley to Newport.

SHIPPING HELD UP BY THICK FOG

A thick, soupy fog shut down over Greater Boston and the coast early today, slowing down automobiles and delaying shipping.

The New York boat Boston was 40 minutes late, the Belfast and Bangor steamer was 25 minutes late and the Savannah line freighter City of St. Louis was held up outside.

The Cedric of the White Star line was slowed up, but was reported entering the outer harbor. Fishing craft operated slower than usual until the sun burned through shortly before 9 o'clock.

According to the weather bureau, there is no storm in sight, and normal summer weather will obtain for a day or two at least. The unofficial forecast: Partly cloudy today and Tuesday; not much change in temperature.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

A Bostonian, who is long on statistics, told his wife that a man of 70 years spends 19 years working during this time, 23 years in bed, 9 years amusing himself and 2 years shaving himself.

I think that he obtained this sort of reckoning from some other source than his own efforts, because his wife could not be reconciled to the measurement of years for shaving, which are away off in reckoning the time he consumes daily in this achievement. She thinks that 10 years would be a more correct summary than two years.

Praises Men Who Tear Down Train Shed

Editor Boston American:

The removing of the great shed over the trains starting from South Station, is well nigh completed. It is a great improvement from many angles. Those who have watched daily this great work going on, have been impressed with the careful way that it has been done.

No fatal accident has occurred. Several accidents happened, one more serious than the others. Of course, such a big piece of work as this, even with the utmost care could not be free from sort of a mishap. This was to be expected.

But as I have watched daily this work going on and admired the gangs of men working in dangerous positions, I felt that such an undertaking so well handled should not go by without some public notice.

Praises Cardinal For Honesty Utterance

Editor Boston American:

His Eminence Cardinal O'Connell, among the many helpful things said in his address before the Knights of Columbus convention, said this:

"There are so many people nowadays getting money that does not belong to them that it is a great privilege to say: 'What I have I earned.'"

This is very true. It is so true that it should be constantly in one's thoughts. People who can look around their humble homes and declare: "what I have I have earned" make their homes reflect what their brawny hands and tired brains have accomplished. This is the kind of capital that sews a bright thread into the texture of life's doings.

There are people who assume that they are smart because they can get something for nothing. But there are others who revere hard work, whose skill and unceasing effort have crowned their existence. But above all they have nothing to regret, for honest work and honest endeavors are their own rewards.

Points to the Good Prohibition has Done

Editor Boston American:

Your editorial against prohibition, I read with bated breath. Your excellent paper in the past did so much to drive drink away from the drunkard that I was somewhat nettled to find you stabbing prohibition.

May I say it is not ideal. No law is ideal. Law, however, does some good. Prohibition is not ideal. But it has done so much good among the poor in our cities and it has helped many a mother to see sunshine in her many duties of homekeeping.

If you really knew to what extent prohibition has done good to the working classes, toiling masses, you as well as others would try to judge prohibition, not by its failures, but by its results in bringing happiness to many homes. Having had a long experience with drunks in different cities, rescuing drunken women from hell kitchens and other places, I can't help but see good in prohibition after what I have seen in other conditions. Nothing in the shape of reform is perfect. But it is good to have it.

Find Women Have More Freedom Here

Editor Boston American:

There is more freedom for women in the United States than in England. There are a few instances in England where women have broken through the net of opposition to them.

They are not permited to sit as members of the House of Lords but it would take a woman to tame some of these lords and no one else can do it, but a woman.

English women like America, when they see the way that American women are treated here. The English women who have come to Boston have noticed this, particularly those who have come over here in some official way with their husbands, this summer.

Your correspondent is not right in claiming that women have more rights in England than in America.

Holland Has Liquor But Little Intoxication

Editor Boston American:

I just saw a friend of mine who has just returned from Holland. In fact he is a native of that country. He told me that there is no prohibition in Holland but the people are very temperate. they certainly know how to use liquor without the shackles of prohibition.

"During all my journeys this summer through Holland, I never saw but one drunk. People have beer and light wines. They know how to use them and never lose their self respect. I wish that some of our prohibitionists would study surroundings in that country" he said.

Personally I'm sorry that we have run prohibition into politics in this country. It has thrown into the shade some of the constituent features of party politics which are being ignored for this prohibition incubus.

Seeks Information on Wilkins' Polar Trip

Editor Boston American:

Does any one know anything further about the plans of Sir Hubert Wilkins, who is preparing to get to the North Pole by submarine? The plan as originally made was to start from Spitzbergen, going across the pole to Alaska which he claims can be done in 50 days.

I understand that he will use an American submarine and will have different nationalities with him, among them being some Americans.

Does any one know how to reach him?

Here's Some Tips For Man Seeking a Wife

Editor Boston American:

Marriage is the most interesting as well as the most influential event in life. That case in New York lately shows how unprepared many couples are for marriage. If this should meet the eyes of any thinking of marriage here are some lights to direct marriage.

If a woman to whom you are attracted is careless about money, she will be the same after marriage. She has no true valuation of the worth-while things of life.

Beware of the selfish girl or one who has traits of selfishness.

Beware of the woman who is easily bored, craving new excitements and showing little or no capacity to get happiness out of the simple things of life.

Marry a woman who resembles your mother in her affection for you. All this sprung into my mind, when reading that marital "blow up" of a couple in New York, which is likely to happen in Boston social circles.

Mosquito "Martyr" To Receive Decision

Editor Boston American:

James C. Burke, formerly of Boston, but now of Los Angeles, who for half of his life time has suffered from malarial fever, will receive a pension of $125 a month from the United States Government.

Burke volunteered for experimentation, allowing mosquitoes to bite him and thus became infected with the disease. Scientists learned much about this fever from studying Burke and in their treatments of him.

He thus sacrificed himself to help out the causes of malarial fever. He deserves his pension and more consideration even than this.

Tells What Causes Appendicitis Jump

Editor Boston American:

That news item in your paper about the increase of appendicitis in this country recalls that the malady is largely due to fad diets, modern habits of living, self prescription, overuse of laxative medicines and mineral oils.

These are the prominent causes leading to the increase in appendicitis mortality. In 1928 more than 18,000 deaths in the United States were assigned to this cause alone.

There is an increase of 20 per cent of deaths in males and 14 per cent increase in females. More attention must be given to diet and eating too much, is the wail of the doctors. As your item did not include the number of deaths in one year and causes of this disease, I have ventured to give them to your readers.

Cardinal's Words Recall Eliot's Talk

Editor Boston American:

Something was said by Cardinal O'Connell in his address before the K. of C. about the honesty to be put into work, and it reminded me of what the late President Eliot of Harvard said of the advantages of being the son of a poor family. He described in detail how a strong young lad of fourteen in order to help his family, plowed and harrowed, sawed and split wood, fished, carried water. Then he added, the son of such a family had securities against laziness, selfishness, self indulgence and had, too, many inducements to be diligent and helpful.

The Cardinal said the man of today, to be honored, has this distinction,

"What I have I earned."

It would be a good thing if many of the scions of our wealthy citizens could have the training of the farm life of twenty years back.

ALL TYPES OF GIRLS SEEK PARIS TRIP

Blondes, brunettes and titians—

Of every height and weight—

Of astounding accomplishments and versatility—

And home-girls—

NEW ENGLAND WIDE

From all over New England is the Typical Girl Editor receiving communications and entries in the unusual contest now being conducted by the Boston Evening American and Gloria Swanson, the contest which carries with it that enviable opportunity, a trip to Paris and a week to enjoy that city.

Girls with imaginations and vision are those from whom the Typical New England Girl Editor has received application. Girls who have never been abroad but who realize the advantages and the cultural benefits of such travel. Girls who so want to win this contest.

Well after Sept. 15, midnight, when the contest closes and the lucky girl will know and then she will go to New York, meet the representatives of Miss Swanson, be taken to a private showing of her latest film, "What a Widow," which is to appear in Boston at Loew's State, sometime the first part of next year, and then treated to a bon voyage party as she steps aboard the Ile de France, that chateau of the Atlantic, with four or five other lucky winners.

TRIP TO PARIS

Twenty-five girls are to be selected throughout the country but small parties of four or five will make the trip at a time. In Paris with $200 in her pocketbook, Miss New England will see those places she has been thrilled by in the movies and read about in fiction, she will see them as they are. What a moment for any girl!

An "educational representative," is Miss Eleanor Fletcher of No. 7 Arundel ter., Newton. A blonde with 130 pounds to her credit, Miss Fletcher is a member of the Young Women's Christian Association and of the Girls' Club in West Newton. Music, literature, art, business and athletics, she underlines on the coupon as some of her outside interests and activities.

In addition, she says, she is church choir singer and librarian, interested in right reading for children, which is her business, has studied water color and china painting, and likes tennis and hiking and enjoys cooking.

DIFFERENT TYPES

While a stenographer is Kathleen H. Randall of No. 8 Harlow st., Dorchester, whose talents are musical. Another brunette.

Listing no activities or accomplishments, Anna Malione of No. 3 Blossom st., Boston, writes she is a "home girl," a brunette, five feet three inches in height and 138 lbs. in weight.

And we look through our bulky files we find these entries: One from Madeline Eastwood of Allen lane, Dedham, a sales-girl and a blonde who likes to swim and indulge in outdoors sports; another from Frances E. Anders, 8 Stewart st., Lynn, brunette and a home-girl; Madeline Kabustion, 51 Lincoln st., Hudson, brunette, and a home-girl; Lucy Demers, 22 Dunfey st., brunette, of musical proclivities; Agnes Hansen, Oak Bluffs, blonde, and interested in domestic science; Mrs. Julia Tedesso, 9 Crescent ave., South Braintree, brunette, who enjoys home life; Alice B. Anderson, 41 Elm st., Hopkinton, brunette, who is fond of outdoor sports, swimming particularly, and plays the piano, banjo and mandolin.

And so they go, each girl different in looks, different in likes, but all interesting in that one thing—a trip to Paris as the TYPICAL NEW ENGLAND GIRL.

Barton and Clerk Held in Art Blaze

John T. Barton, owner of the Lincoln Art Galleries, Newbury st., and Fred T. Anderson, his clerk, were held for the grand jury today by Judge Goode in Municipal court on a charge of attempting to defraud an insurance company.

Barton was held in $20,000 and Anderson in $5000 on charges brought by an insurance company, following the fire which partly destroyed the galleries on June 29.

Barton had insured paintings for $184,000, but they were not worth that sum, the insurance company asserted.

DO-X TO REFUEL IN MID-OCEAN

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service Special Cable

Friedrichshafen, Aug. 5—The transatlantic flight of the 12-engined Dornier DO-X from Lisbon to New York is now definitely decided upon, though the official announcement to the effect may not be made till the end of this week or the beginning of next.

With the caution and reserve that characterizes Dr. Claude Dornier, he is awaiting this week's trial flights and their scientific results before he will commit himself to an official announcement of the flight.

Meanwhile, preparations are being pushed both here and at the expected landing places in the Azores and Bermudas. These include preparations for a landing in mid-ocean for refueling if that should be found necessary, or even to demonstrate the practicability of such landings for giant aircraft like the DO-X.

Orders have been cabled to charter a ship with radio direction giving instruments and about a 10-ton gasoline tankage capacity. The vessel is to be stationed about 600 miles east and north of the Bermudas.

Today, in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment

Fall Jellies Are Now in Order

From Martha Lee's Wednesday morning broadcast over WHDH by the Boston Evening American.

Martha Lee

ALTHOUGH I'VE talked a good deal about jelly-making, I received so many letters during the current season as to "Why my currant jelly didn't jell?" or "What makes my jelly so gummy?" that I do think we should have one more jelly lesson before the grape and apple jelly season is in full swing.

Really jelly making need no longer be a matter of luck—it is just as sure as the rule of two and two, if you will test your fruit juice before making your jelly. Currents, green apples, unripe grapes and cranberries made ideal jellies and can be combined with quince, peaches and pears to get satisfactory jellies with delicious flavors. Apple jelly alone is rather flat, but mint leaves, nasturtium leaves, rose geranium or spices can be tied in cheese cloth and boiled with the apple juice before the sugar is added. A little green coloring will give it an attractive appearance, and you will have a thoroughly satisfactory jelly.

Rule No. 1 in jelly-making is not to try to make too much at a time. Two and a half or three quarts of juice can be managed successfully, and remember, in extracting the juice from your fruit use only just enough water to keep them from sticking. Mash the fruit while heating gradually and cook until the pulp loses its color. Cut hard fruits into pieces without paring or coring and cook with just enough water to cover until the fruit is tender. Don't mash hard fruit if you wish to have a clear jelly. Only soft fruits such as berries and grapes should be mashed. Strain the juice through a wet flannel jelly bag and let it drip without pressing for the clearest jelly.

TEST FRUIT JUICE

To test the fruit juice, mix together 1 tbsp. of cooked fruit juice, 1 tsp. of sugar and ½ tsp. of epsom salts. Stir until the salts dissolve and let stand for 20 minutes. If the fruit juice has sufficient pectin to make good jelly the mixture will form a jelly-like mass, or large flaky particles. If too much water has been used in getting the juice, it will not respond to the test, and in this case the juice should be cooked down and another test made. When the juice does jelly as it should, it will call for a cup of sugar to a cup of juice in the jelly making. Measure the juice, bring it to a boil, add the correct amount of sugar and stir until dissolved. Boil rapidly and do not skim until the jelly is done. You can tell when the juice has reached the jellying point by dipping a spoon frequently into the juice and holding it above the kettle. When two drops hang together from the side of the spoon, the jelly is ready to take from the fire. If you use a candy thermometer, the temperature should read 221 degrees to 223 degrees, but the drop test should be also used. If you are making jam or marmalade and like it to have a stiff body, you can use the same two-drop test, or if you like softer marmalade, the test is one very heavy drop.

After removing your jelly from the stove, skim it and pour it into hot glasses. When firm pour hot melted paraffin over the top—and be sure that the paraffin is very hot so that any bacteria which may have settled on the jelly while it was cooling may be killed. Next morning put on another layer of paraffin, tipping the glass around so that there will be a perfect seal and no space between the jelly and the side of the glass. Then cover with tin lids or tight paper covers and set away, carefully labelled, in a dark, cool place.

GRAPE JELLY

Use ripe or green grapes as preferred. (Wild green grapes make an especially good jelly to serve with meats.) Pick the grapes when dry and wash them. Squeeze or mash in a preserving kettle and cook slowly until the skins look shriveled and empty. Heat slowly after mashing, and cook for 30 minutes. Then strain, allowing the juice to drip through a wet jelly bag. Measure the juice back into the kettle and bring quickly to the boiling point, and boil for five minutes. Then add a cup of sugar for a cup of juice, boil for about 30 minutes and test as directed. Place a hot spoon in each jelly glass as it is filled to prevent breakage.

For Apple Jelly, cut the apples in chunks, cover with cold water nearly to the top of the apples and cook until the fruit goes to pieces. Drip through the bag as directed. Boil for 20 minutes and add an equal quantity of hot sugar. Boil up for a few minutes more and test.

For Mint Jelly, crush the mint leaves and boil with the apple jelly, taking care not to get too much mint. A little green vegetable coloring should be added to the jelly before taking from the stove. Half apples and half cranberries makes an especially delicious jelly, and some people are very fond of spiced apple jelly made by adding lemon juice, stick cinnamon, whole cloves and allspice to the apples when they are first cooked. This is particularly good to serve with meats.

Any special jams, jellies or marmalades that you would like to have? A post card request to my office at 5 Winthrop sq., will bring them to you promptly.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

INEXPENSIVE TO MAKE is the Fresno square recipe sent in by Mrs. Edna M. Kingsbury of East Derry, N. H.

Yeast is Good Health Food

Something new in candy—that is good for you! A delicious chocolate fudge bar in which is hidden all the rich nourishment of high-grade confections with the added healthful attraction of yeast. If you've been planning to start your yeast three times a day now's your chance to "crash the gate" to health and high spirits.

Make yeast in this easy-to-take form part of your regular diet, and soon you'll look healthy and happy with a clear skin your friends will envy. They tell me that one person in every third family eats yeast, and that literally millions are grateful and enthusiastic over the results obtained from eating it. There's no question that doctors today are using fewer and fewer drugs and medicines. They are depending more and more on diet—food—in the treatment of diseases. Unlike medicine, yeast is a corrective food—a plant grown in an extract of malt and grain, and can be eaten regularly with only beneficial results.

Why drag along half sick? When a package of this delicious health confection will make you feel fit and vigorous.

Kellogg's RICE KRISPIES

Molasses Cookies Take a Welcome Place

DELICIOUS MOLASSES cookies or cakes find a welcome place in the housewife's cooking schedule, and if you are looking for something especially nice, try these delightful Fresno Squares, sent in by Mrs. Edna M. Kingsbury, P. O. Box 68, of East Derry, N. H., which takes the $5 weekly recipe prize. These squares are a cross between a cake and a candy. You will find their keeping qualities excellent, too—locked up. They fit especially well with summer beverages for porch parties, bridge refreshment, etc.

FRESNO SQUARES

1-3 c. sugar
½ c. Crisco
½ c. Grandma's molasses
2 Hood's eggs
1 c. seeded raisins
1 c. Ceresota flour
¼ tsp. Worcester salt
1 c. chopped nut meats
½ tsp. vanilla extract

Cream Crisco and sugar together. Add eggs well beaten, molasses, vanilla, flour, salt and nuts. Divide into small fancy Criscoed tins or bake in Criscoed sheet tin one-half hour in moderate oven and cut in squares.

We are interested to see that Mrs. Kingsbury uses our favorite molasses. You'll always find a generous supply in the Martha Lee Kitchen. I suppose most of us have long since forgotten the sulphur 'n' m'lasses we had to take as a regular spring tonic when we were very young, but whether or not, that molasses was just the best thing in the world for us, even if science hadn't got around to proving it. Nowadays we hear a lot of imposing talk about "laboratory experiments," 'vitamines," "mineral elements" and what not.

All it means is—eat plenty of eggs, milk, green vegetables, fresh fruit, and safely assimilated sweets. And molasses is just the best little assimilator you ever saw. A large part of this favorite molasses contains fruit sugar, which is the form all sugar must turn to before it can be absorbed by the stomach. You will notice at once the sweetness and flavor of this molasses, and the absence of any burned or bitter taste. This delicious natural flavor gives to foods an appearance and taste you will recognize as unusual. Molasses is slightly laxative, of course, and the children should be encouraged to eat as much as they like on bread and in cake and cookie form.

Today's recipe, I've no doubt, will become so popular, you'll have to make large batches to keep on hand for the whole family. But you won't mind this, even in hot weather, when cookie making is a sort of bugbear, if you are equipped with the insulated gas range such as we use in the Martha Lee Kitchen. The oven is so insulated with 60 pounds of mineral wool that the heat stays in the inside, where it does the work, and doesn't spread all over the kitchen. This, of course, reduces cooking time and is highly economical. If you haven't seen our two wonderful gas ranges, in the Martha Lee Kitchen, do drop in any time, and I'm sure you'll be delighted with them, and we'll be delighted to show them to you.

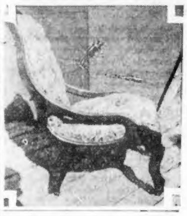
DAILY ANTIQUE

No. 179

If you are real tired some evening and can't find a chair that will rest you, try to get one just like this. You will have a lot of trying, but if successful, you'll have a great chair. This mahogany chair is the property of Mrs. W. L. Champney, 300 Prospect st., Cambridge. It has been in the family for several generations. Grapes and leaves are carved at the top. Of all the antiques owned by Mrs. Champney, this chair is her "pet."



Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of antiques of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, providing the owner lives in Greater Boston. Sunshine Graham Crackers are tenderly guarded from our ovens right to your home. The sturdy outside wax-wrapper locks moisture out ... locks crispness in!

Headed by Mrs. Rodney Damon of Hopedale, the halls and seating committee has one of the biggest jobs of the entire 1930 American Legion Auxiliary national convention, which opens in the city Oct. 6, continuing for three days. Not only are all the meetings to be held in Symphony Hall, but the state's dinner as well, and preparations for this event, the outstanding social event of the convention, are taxing the efforts and energies of central committee, headed by Mrs. Lee Bishop of the Massachusetts department and a former president of the National Auxiliary.

Eight hundred delegates are expected to be seated on the convention floor, which, according to convention officials, is to be set up as are the political pow wows. So many seats will be asigned to each state, the roll of states depending upon their position in membership.

Not only does the committee with Mrs. Damon and her two vice-chairmen, Mrs. John Whelton of Boston and Mrs. John Gray of Westford, have to arrange for this, but provisions must be made also for meeting places within the hall for at least 16 other committee sessions, each with 50 or more members.

A first aid room, a reception room for the distinguished guests of the convention and a meeting place for the national executive board of the auxiliary must also be arranged. For the latter Faneuil Hall has been given for use by Mayor Curley.

The halls and seating committee include also Mrs. Edith MacNevin, Hopedale, secretary; Mrs. Blanche Abbott, Wakefield; Mrs. Baker, Lexington; Miss Grace Bresnahan, Beverly Farms; Mrs. Lydia Frechette, Lawrence; Mrs. Pearle Hawke, North Andover; Miss Mary Hoffman, Hudson; Miss Marie Lynons, North Billerica; Mrs. Mary Morgan, Beverly Farms; Mrs. Mathilda Murphy, Lynn; Mrs. Elizabeth Newell, Hopedale; Miss Aurilla Rolfe, Cambridge, and Mrs. Mary Saunders, North Andover.

Caroline Read Announces Her Bridal Attendants

WEDDING BELLS WILL chime for Miss Caroline Read, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilson Read of Cambridge, on Friday, October 3, when she is married to Francis Appleton Harding of Dedham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis Harding of that town. The ceremony will take place at the Emmanuel Church, Newbury st., Boston, at 4 o'clock and Dr. William Greenough Thayer will officiate, after which a reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents at 55 Appleton st., Cambridge.

MISS MAY WELCH READ will be her sister's maid of honor and another sister, Miss Jean Read, will be among the attendants, the other bridesmaids being Miss Caroline Powell, Miss Harriette Blake, Miss Catherine Wayne, Miss Sarah Wambolt, Miss Gertrude Marean, Miss Anna Walcott and Miss Nancy Johnson. Mr. Harding's best man will be his brother, Mr. Charles Lewis Harding, Jr., whose engagement to Miss Parish of New York has recently been announced. John B. Harding and Henry K. Harding, two younger brothers, Robert P. Read, John Lewis, Henry Babcock, Adams Batcheler, Kent Willing, A. Lithgow Devens, Eliot T. Putnam and Walter Hardie will be his ushers.

THE BRIDAL COUPLE WILL spend their wedding trip touring Europe. Miss Read is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club and is one of the most popular members of the young set. Mr. Harding was graduated from Harvard in 1930.

Children's Hospital Will Benefit From Programs on Cape

THIS IS CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL week on the Cape, and many delightful programs have been planned. On Wednesday the midget singles tennis tournament will be played at the Pocasset Golf Club. The Misses Bright, Austin and Harding have charge of arrangements. On Tuesday, Sept. 2, at South Side Wings Neck, a handicap boat race for amateurs will take place and the invitations state to bring bathing suits and a picnic lunch. Miss Susan Morse and Miss Eleanor Hallowell of Pocasset and Milton are on this committee.

THE NEXT DAY, WEDNESDAY, a senior ladies and junior singles tennis tournament will provide the thrill of the day, and luncheon will be served at the Pocasset Golf Club. Mrs. Francis A. Harding of Chestnut Hill, whose daughter, Miss Elizabeth will be one of the buds this winter, is giving a dinner before the dance at the Megansett Tea Room on Friday, Sept. 5. This dance will wind up the festivities for the week, and many dollars are expected to swell the fund for the Children's Hospital.

MISS ROSAMOND HOLTON of Boston and Phillips Beach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Holton, will be the house guest of Betty Spaulding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Spalding at their camp in the Adirondacks this week. Mr. Robert C. Duane of Manchester Cove will also be one of the house party.

Gretchen Bremer Will Make Debut at Dance on October 8

ONE OF THE FIRST "BUD" dances will be on October 8, at the Milton Club, to introduce Miss Gretchen Bremer, daughter of the Clifton L. Bremers, of Milton, who have been spending the month at Cohasset, with Dr. and Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer. I hear that Miss Anne Dick's dance on the North Shore September 28 may be indefinitely postponed on account of the serious illness of her sister, Miss Liberty. Miss Dick is to be a debutante this winter and no doubt will have a party later in the season.

New Mode for the Fashionable Woman

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs, or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser, or to Station WHDH.

FALL IS HERE—that season most filled with promise for the modern woman. It ushers in a new round of social activities, a new year at the club, a full schedule of duties in connection with one's favorite charity; and the routine management of house and family, which necessitates many pleasant shopping and business trips into town.

* * *

SUCH A program can only be met with poise and got through with distinction if one's wardrobe is adequate to every occasion and smart enough to assure an attractive appearance at all times.

* * *

VELVET RUNS the gamut of the fall mode and is smart in all of its guises. Velvet afternoon dresses mostly in black, some velvet suits with metal or satin blouses, velvet evening wraps which are short in front and down in back, velvet evening dresses and velvet hats draped in tam and beret styles are smart aspects of this vogue.

* * *

THE VELVET costume pictured is in a rich deep brown shade, with a hint of mauve in its tone, has many interesting fashion points, and is most graceful and wearable. The frock is one-piece, with circular side sections in the skirt, a draped neckline, bloused back, and vestee of cream lace.

* * *

THE SLEEVES end in deep points over the hands, and are tied in lace-tipped bows above the elbow. The belt is of velvet, with cleverly placed rhinestone buckle ornaments.

* * *

THE BECOMING brimmed hat is also of brown velvet, with rhinestone ornaments holding bows across the back. The necklace is of Carnelian and silver, the bag beige leather, gloves and hose toned beige, and strap pumps of brown suede.

* * *

BUCKLES ARE used on everything. Cuffs are buckled. Every belt has a buckle and buckles are found on necklaces and now on hats. Wood is also excellent as a trimming note. Therefore when a wooden buckle appears as the only trimming on a soft sport hat it is just the note that is needed. A hat trimmed in such a manner was seen recently at a smart French resort.

NATIONAL DOUBLES AT LONGWOOD

FOR SPORTS—CALL LIBERTY 4000 MONDAY, AUGUST 25, 1930 FOR SPORTS—CALL LIBERTY 4000

I found Mr. Boston at the Wollaston Golf Club this morning watching the youngsters tee off in the Hearst Junior Golf Championship.

"Bill Grimes tel's me 455 boys will compete in today's qualifying round," chirped Mr. Boston. "If Bill had not been obliged to close the entries a week ago, the entry list would have topped 1000.

Jack Conway

"Sixty of the boys who are competing today have already proved their ability in important tournaments. They will have to keep their scores down, however, if they are to stand off the rush of some of the newcomers.

"Only the other day I saw an unknown caddy shoot an 80 at one of the South Shore courses.

"Ten years from now the United States will have a golf champion on every corner. There is something about smacking a golf ball that appeals to every youngster. Perhaps it is because one does not have to be able to hit a curve ball or inshoot in order to give the agate a ride.

"When Francis Ouimet, as a graduate of the caddy ranks, won the national open championship at The Country Club in Brookline, little did he think that there would come a day when 455 New England boys would tee off in a junior tournament at a Greater Boston course.

"I can remember when most sporting editors looked upon golf as a lady-like pastime and refused to give it much space in their columns. A sporting editor who fails to feature golf today merely proves his own incompetency.

Garden to Insist on Three Fight Contracts

"Alex MacLean tells me that the Boston Garden will insist on contracts for three fights in future when it signs up any main bout performer. Alex says he will not feature any boxer who refuses to consent to such an arrangement.

"Henry Lamar, Belmont heavyweight who clashes with Marty Gallagher at Braves Field tomorrow night, has already signed one of these three fight contracts. In addition to being signed to meet Gallagher, Lamar is also booked to clash with James J. Braddock and Jim Maloney.

"The Garden has the right to call off any of the matches in the event Lamar meets with a defeat. MacLean probably feels he won't have to do this as Maloney is the only man who has been able to defeat Lamar during the latter's pro career. And the grandson of a former member of the United States Supreme Court has had 40 ring battles.

"Lamar now scales 190 pounds and he feels he is ready for the first flight of heavyweights.

Stormy Week-End Upset Plans of Yachtsmen

"The stormy week-end was a keen disappointment to thousands of New England yachtsmen. I find that yachting is gaining in favor and that there are more fine racing crafts in our waters than ever.

"I dropped down to Duxbury the other day and saw a mighty array of racing yachts in Duxbury Bay. Few people know that Duxbury at one time was the leading shipping center in New England. Sailing craft from all parts of the world anchored in its beautiful harbor.

"Duxbury Bay is today given over almost entirely to pleasure crafts. These boats were tossed around by an angry sea on Saturday, but few of them broke away from their moorings.

"Golf in the morning and yachting in the afternoon is the athletic program of most residents of the South Shore.

"The North Shore also has its thousands of yachts. Salem, in the days of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, was a great shipping port. Duxbury and Salem ranked well ahead of Boston."

New York, Aug. 25—An international tennis series between the United States and Great Britain will be played Saturday at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills.

Percy Williams, double Olympic sprint champion, was named for the dashes, but his tendon, pulled during the finals of the 100-yard dash yesterday, probably will prevent him from competing.

The British empire team will be as follows:

Stark scored for Fall River 10 minutes after the opening whistle. Fourteen minutes later Spechtl tallied for the Austrians, and the first half ended with the teams deadlocked.

The second half was very fast, with the Americans dominating play throughout. Ashton shot Fall River's second goal and a few minutes later Stark booted another.

FEATURE PERFORMERS IN DOUBLES WEEK AT LONGWOOD

BIG BILL TILDEN, long ruler of American tennis, will be seen in action at Longwood this week, in quest of the doubles title.

Frank Hunter

Barry Wood

THE NATIONAL DOUBLES TITLE will be the objective of these stellar stars of the tennis troupe which plays at Longwood Cricket Club, Chestnut Hill, this week. Tilden and Hunter form a strong veteran combination.

John Doeg

Barry Wood, the famed Harvard athlete, teams with Dick Murphy, a fellow Crimson collegian. Johnny Doeg, the rangy Californian, now holds the crown with George Lott of Chicago. A brilliant week is expected.

REDS-WHITES IN POLO TIE

Port Washington, N. Y., Aug. 25 (US)—The "Reds" tied Tommy Hitchcock's "Whites" in the 10th international test match to determine the United States team at Sands Point, L. I., yesterday.

The "Reds" and Hitchcock's "Whites" fought to a Mexican stand-off at 13 to 13, in a match that had more finesse and smarter polo than any seen on Long Island since 1928.

A crowd of 12,000, the largest crowd in the history of Sands Point polo, saw the match.

The "Reds," working as a unit, gave the "Whites" a taste of team work such as they may be called upon to face against the British next week. While the "Whites" succeeded in outscoring them by 11 to 4 on the flat, Hitchcock's team was called upon to play with something that looked very much like bitterness.

TAYLOR HERO OF CUBS' WIN

The play, one of baseball's most sensational and one rarely seen, was the climax of the crucial series and gave the Cubs a 3 to 2 triumph, to boost them five full games ahead of the pack in the National League championship struggle.

Ober Wins 10-Mile Quincy Marathon

Julius Ober of the B. A. A. led a field of 29 to the tape in the 10-mile modified marathon conducted at Merrymount Park, Quincy, yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Italian-American Athletic Association, as part of the festivities of the ninth annual field day of the organization. Earl Collins of Medford made the best time and was awarded the time prize. Quincy's favorite son, John Holmy, of the B. A. A., was seventh.

The prizes awarded by Mayor Thomas J. McGrath were given to Julius Ober, Governor Allen cup; John Semple, Quincy Trust Co. cup; John Peck, Granite Trust Co. cup; Joseph Quirk, mayor's cup; J. Smith, Congressman Richard B. Wigglesworth cup; Earl Collins, Frank D. Coffman cup and time prize, a cup donated by Hon. Eben Draper; John Holmy, Hon. Chester I. Campbell cup; Lewis Smith, Joseph B. Grossman cup; Frank McCune, Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman cup; Agostini Signore, William A. Lamb cup.

WINS HEARST SWIM TROPHY

Chicago, Aug. 25—Emma Shemaitis, repeating her victory in the Herald and Examiner's women's marathon for the third time has taken permanent possession of the $1,000 Hearst championship swimming trophy.

The Illinois Women's Athletic Club star, who had won in 1927 and 1929, finished by herself with a margin of 80 yards at the end of the mile and a quarter course, held Sunday in the Lincoln Park landlocked lagoon.

Five of her teammates gave the I. W. A. C. a sweep of the places. Mary Ellen Stark was second; Marion Dose, third; Daney Van Maarth, fourth; Violet Morton, fifth, and Regina Glidea, sixth.

It was the fifth Herald and Examiner marathon, and the 19-year-old Emma's victory represented a triumph in the "crucial" swim of the series.

In the four previous marathons she had split first places with Isabelle Smith, also of the I. W. A. C. Each won twice. The race yesterday was scheduled as a personal duel between them, but Isabelle couldn't do any better than twelfth, and saw her rival take the huge silver cup. Miss Shemaitis swam the long race in 34:07.

A field of 291 swimmers took the water at the gun in the senior contest, while 141 juniors competed. It was the biggest field in the five years of the meet, and a crowd of 50,000 lined the course.

Lincoln Fields Opens

Hub Horse May Run in $70,000 Race at Goshen

The feature race, the $70,000 Hambletonian stake for three-year-olds, will be held Wednesday.

Boston followers of light harness racing are interested in the Hambletonian, as Mrs. Charles F. Adams's three-year-old, Larkspur, 2:06¾, is listed as a probable starter. Townsend Ackerman will drive the daughter of Guy Axworthy. The other Boston entry for the Hambletonian, Enchantress III, will not go, Allan J. Wilson figuring she is not fit.

While the Hambletonian will feature the meeting, there are several other events at the Orange county track which should offer some brilliant competition. One of these is the $5000 Board of Trade stake for 2:08 pacers, listed to be raced on Thursday afternoon.

Listed to face the starter is one of the best fields of pacers to go this season. Included in the lot are such cracks as Highland Scott 1:59¼; May E. Grattan 2:01, winner of the $25,000 pacing derby at Kalamazoo; Berry the Great 2:00½; Kinney Direct 2:00¾; Mrs. Adam's Better Win 2:01¼; Enoch Guy 2:01½, and other glib wrigglers.

The $5000 Goshen Inn Stake for 2:10 trotters on the card for tomorrow will see such celebrities as Hollyrood Harrod 2:02¼; Athlone Guy 2:03⅛; Axmoko 2:04; Happy the Great 2:04¼; Allan J. Wilson's Hollyrood Dick 2:05½; Quality 2:04¾; Tronia Britton 2:04¼; Senator Brewer 2:05, and other select fast goers.

Today's program at Goshen offers a 2:22 trot for $1000, two-year-old pace for $1500; 2:14 trot for $2000, and an open class pace. Tomorrow will see a two-year-old trot for $5000; 2:10 trot for $5000; three-year-old pace for $1500, and an open class trot.

Wednesday comes the big day with the Hambletonian three-year-old trot for $70,000; 2:14 pace for $2000; three-year-old pace for $5000, and a handicap trot for $2000. Thursday offers a three-year-old trot for $3000; 2:08 pace for $5000; 2:18 trot for $2000, and an open class trot.

The closing day, Friday, will see the fast steppers go out to score in a handicap pace for a purse of $2000, an open class for pacers and another for trotters, and a special event.

LUCY RECS WIN CLOSE GAME

Lusitania Recreation soccer team of Cambridge defeated Pawtucket of the American Soccer league, 2 to 1, in an exhibition game in Lusitania Stadium, Cambridge, yesterday.

Bob McIntyre and "Sonny" Foley netted for the Massachusetts State league champs, and Gordon Burness, former Hubite, notched Pawtucket's only score.

Fifteen minutes from time, "Sonny" Foley notched one of the greatest goals ever registered in these parts, the wee winger planting the ball in the far corner of the rigging to score what proved to be the decisive tally of a hard fought encounter.

DIAMOND PICK-UPS

A few records were established during the Sabbath twin bill between the Red Sox and White Sox. The first game was completed in 69 minutes, which is the fastest time in which a big league contest has been played for several years.

The second game went eleven innings and was all over at 5:30 p. m. Previously, not more than 18 innings had ever been finished on a Sunday in the Hub before the 6 o'clock closing time. And for once, the Wagners didn't collapse at some time or other before a Sunday audience, playing great ball from the start of the opener until the finish of the nightcap.

Milt Gaston's pitching in the opener, which the natives won, 2 to 0, was about the finest seen here this season. He gave but three scattered singles, one base on balls and fanned six. Only one enemy reached as far as third and none would have seen second but for errors. Milt also helped his cause by hitting a double to knock in the Sox' second run. It was his tenth win of the season.

Gaston's opponent, Ed Faber, veteran spit-ball artist, was even better than the local hurler up to the seventh, but he weakened towards the close to suffer his first defeat in six starts. "Red" who is well over 40 years old and has been pitching in the big show close to a score of years, appeared all through the first two visits of the White Sox to the Hub, but yesterday he looked plenty good enough to keep on winning for several years more.

The Wagners' victory in the first was their 12th in 18 starts against the Pale Hose and insured them of the edge over their seventh-place rivals for the season.

When it is raining in Brooklyn it is natural to assume that it is also raining across the bridge in New York, but while the Braves and Dodgers were being kept idle by showers on the Sabbath, the Yanks and Indians played two games across the river.

Former Fitton Grid Player Succumbs

Searles, an oversea veteran, was long identified with sports and played on the Fitton football team. He was a member of the Flaherty Post, American Legion.

TILDEN HEADS COLORFUL ARMY OF NET STARS

By JOHN GILLOOLY

Bill Tilden and his colorful regiment of tennis stars parade into the Longwood Cricket Club grounds, Chestnut Hill, today to pitch camp for one solid week, during which a war will be waged for the 49th national doubles crown.

Doubles week at Longwood finds this great army of net stars making their Boston stop at the annual northern invasion up the Atlantic seaboard. And before the week is out Boston tennis enthusiasts will have had their share of tennis thrills.

There will be five tournaments conducted during the week. Today the national doubles start. Tomorrow the ladies' invitation tournament is added to the lists. Wednesday finds the fathers and sons, veterans, and mixed doubles, all carrying national titles, under way.

Doeg and Lott Are Defending Champions

Johnny Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., and George M. Lott of Chicago, are the defending champions in the national doubles. They took their championship a year ago at Longwood defeating Berkeley Bell and Lewis White, a pair of Texans.

Doeg and Lott have been seeded first after much meditation by Richard Bishop and Irving C. Wright who made the draw. But there have been so many upsets recorded in this tennis season that the draw means little and the draw-designers, Mr. Bishop and Mr. Wright, may find half of their seeded choice knocked out of the running before the third round is reached.

Perhaps the most dangerous combination in the current tournament is that of Sydney Wood and Frank Shields, an unseeded pair. Shields and Wood are both young and the most promising of youthful ranks. Bill Tilden selects these two lads as the coming standard-bearers in international tennis. If they are in proper form the Wood-Shields merger is likely to slash its way through the field to the final bracket.

Two other unseeded teams, Berkeley Bell and Gregory Mangin and Barry Wood and Dick Murphy, the Harvard representatives, are also to be placed on the "dangerous list." These three teams are "dark horses" because their members have got more than ordinary ability and the unquenchable spirit of youth.

Tilden and Hunter Will Fight for Crown

Bill Tilden and Frank Hunter are not to be overlooked. Nor are Johnny Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison who piled up doubles honor a year ago but haven't been able to reach that peak of perfection since.

Ireland is to be represented in the tournament by G. Lyttleton Rogers, a six-foot-six son of Erin who was a member of the Irish Davis Cup team. There are three British entries in the draw but none of them are threatening. Canada is represented by Marcel Rainville, a Davis Cup player, who will team with Fred C. Baggs of New York. Lyttleton plays with Watson Washburn of New York.

Ciaci and Hopkins Tied for Hearst Junior Lead

BOTH LADS DO COURSE IN 76

Sam Ciaci and R. G. "Bobby" Hopkins, both boys listed among the "dark horses," led the field in the William Randolph Hearst Junior Golf Tournament at the Wollaston Golf Club, Montclair, this morning with almost half the field reported.

Ciaci and Hopkins both had 76's. This score is only three above par and both lads shot remarkable golf for juniors to arrive at this total. Ciaci put together a pair of 38's while Hopkins had a 39 and a 37.

Bill Donnelly, former State Junior Champion, was tied for second place with John Woodruff of Needham, another unknown. Donnelly and Woodruff both turned in 77's to become deadlocked.

Donnelly was one of the outstanding favorites in the tournament and his score surely qualifies him for the match play which starts tomorrow.

Bobby Hunter, sister of the State Junior Girls' champion, Dorothy, was in a tie for third place with Louis Abood. These lads were three strokes behind the leaders with 79's.

Leon K. Emerson, one of the choices to win the beautiful Hearst golf trophy, had an 80. Gerry Moore and Harold McGrail turned in poor cards and may be eliminated. Moore had an 84 and McGrail an 85. McGrail won the caddy title last week.

MANY WOMEN SEEK TITLE

Kansas City, Aug. 25 (AP)—A hundred campaigners sought the women's Western golf title, held by Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, in the week's competition which started today at the Hillcrest Country Club.

Mrs. Hill and Miss Dorothy Page, Madison, Wis., led the qualifiers out on the 18-hole test which will determine the 32 to win places in the championship flight.

Seasoned players among the women expressed the opinion that women's par of 2 would be broken by few of the 100 entrants. Par out is 42, in 40.

Match play will begin Tuesday. All matches, until the 36-hole finals, will be at 18 holes. There will be five other flights besides the championship group.

Among those expected to give Mrs. Hill a battle are Mrs. Gregg Lifur, Los Angeles, runner-up to the defending champion last year at Cleveland; Mrs. G. W. Tyson, Kansas City; Virginia van Wie and Rena Nelson, Chicago; Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis.; Helen Lawson, Los Angeles, and Mrs. C. C. Cary, Dallas.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

RIGHT HEEL ON GROUND WHEN CLUBHEAD GOES THROUGH→

Now if you will make a few practice putts and permit your body to weave forward as you stroke, you will note how the ball leaves the line and misses the cup. The body-weaving means, of course, moving of the head. Some golfers let the head move widely in putting and, unknowingly, they do the same thing with all other efforts to stroke the ball. If the body weaves forward slightly in putting the shoulders push against the ball and the chances are even the toe of the blade is turned inward some, which will never do in putting, where the target is narrow and the line must be exact. In proportion, the same things work havoc with shots in your longer game. These inaccuracies may be slight and of not much bother, and they may range from that clear up to the wildest hooks and slices. One cure for them is to watch your head and keep it still.

Southpaws Feature in Bankers' Game

A pitching duel between two southpaws will be staged tonight at Fenway Park when Gurnett & Company will oppose the Atlantic National Bank team in the first game of a three-game series for the championship of the Bankers & Brokers League.

John "Lefty" Shea, a former star pitcher on the Boston College team, will toe the mound for Gurnett, while Al Koerber, who has established a great reputation in the financial league, will oppose Shea. Both hurlers have had great seasons in their league.

Both have plenty of smoke on the ball, and there is a great natural rivalry between the two. Twice this season Shea has beaten Atlantic with Koerber on the mound, while once Koerber beat Gurnett in a 12-inning game.

Ratsey's Joy Wins Star Class Prize

Port Washington, N. Y., Aug. 25—The Star class boat Joy, owned by Colin Ratsey of the Solent Fleet, England, gained permanent possession of the Captain's Island cup when she won the 40-mile race among craft of that class on Long Island sound. It was the third consecutive triumph for Ratsey's craft in this event.

SWIMMERS ARE FORCED TO QUIT

A heavy sea and freezing water crushed the hopes of the swimmers in the scheduled Marathon from Charlestown bridge to Pemberton yesterday.

None of the starters were able to reach the goal, all of them being taken from the water long before Pemberton was sighted.

Tom Kenney of Cambridge, member of the Boston Swimming Association, however, was was adjudged the winner because of his desperate struggle to conquer the great odds against him.

Kenny swam 5 hours and 35 minutes, but retired at Long Island Head on account of the choppy waves and the turn of the tide.

Joe Jarosh of Cambridge, also a Boston Swimming Association member, swam neck and neck with Kenney all the way, and was taken from the water by his pilot 10 minutes before the winner. Jarosh was given second prize.

Henry Sodergren of East Boston was third; Mike Wrenn, the Lowell policeman, fourth; James Mullen of Charlestown, fifth; Walter Ross of the North End, sixth; Frank Hamilton of Cambridge, seventh; Joe Foley of Charlestown, eighth; Charles Champey, Lawrence, ninth; Dick Donovan of Dorchester, tenth; Bill Nesbit of Medford, 11, and Al Gorbush of Boston, 12th.

The race for the women was also on the schedule but was put over for two weeks on account of the heavy sea.

Newark Defeats Wanderers, 3 to 2

New York, Aug. 25—The Newark American soccer team, which has been reinforced by many of the former players of the defunct Bethlehem Steel team, started the season yesterday by defeating the Brooklyn Wanderers at Hawthorne Field, 3 to 2, before a crowd of 2000.

Notes of the Sandlots

The Bankers and Brokers play-off series gets under way tonight at Fenway Park when Gurnett & Co. plays the Atlantic nine. Gurnett took the title in the first half and Atlantic in the second.

Al Koerber, who pitched Atlantic into a title series, will be on the hill for his team while John Shea will toe the mound for Gurnett & Co. Shea and Koerber are both left-handers and a great duel is expected.

The game is bound to be a hummer for there's a trip to Detroit in the offing for the winners. They'll meet the Detroit champions and then return to Boston to play the New York title-winners.

This is the final week in the Greater Boston Twilight League fight. The second half comes to a close on next Sunday afternoon. It seems now that a playoff series will be necessary for both Dorchester and Roslindale are battling hard to keep Malden from winning the second half as they did in the first half.

Either Dorchester or Roslindale should cop the second-half gonfalon. But if Malden should slip into its second-half title the teams will go on a barnstorming trip through the Cape playing the teams in the Cranberry Circuit. If a playoff is necessary it will start on Labor Day at the Pearl St. Stadium in Malden.

The Somerville Cubs and the Somerville Progressives will open their five-game series at Dilboy Field, Somerville, on Sunday afternoon with the game starting at 3 o'clock.

The color and rivalry of last year's series between these intercity combatants will again mark the coming wars. Skinny Graham, the 42-year-old veteran, will do most of the pitching for the Progressives, and the veteran has vowed that he'll return the championship to Magoun Square.

The Somerville Cubs are hoping that Johnny Murphy will return from the Cape Cod League to pitch them to victory against the Progressives. Murphy has startled the Cape circuit by his brilliant playing with Chatham this summer.

Hack Wilson Is Growing Restless

Chicago, Aug. 25 (AP)—Hack Wilson is becoming restless over the National League home-run situation. Since the Cub outfielder tied the league record of 43 homers last Tuesday, 12 circuit swats have been made in Wrigley Field—but he has been the author of none.

He is especially anxious to set a new mark at the expense of his one-time employer, the New York club. Rogers Hornsby, Zack Taylor, Perce Malone, Eddie Farrell and George Kelly, other Cub ex-Giants, are pulling for Wilson.

Dorchester	13	6	St. John	10	14

Games tonight—Malden at Dorchester; Portland at St. John.

Roslindale maintained its position at the top of the Boston Twilight League by defeating Malden, 12 to 9, in a slugfest at Roslindale yesterday. Herb Rauding led the Roslindale barrage of 17 hits, with a home run, double and single. Solly Thurston made three of Malden's 16 hits.

Dorchester defeated Quincy, 4 to 2, although outbatted by the cellar occupants. Buck Freeman led the Dorchester drive with a pair of doubles.

Skidoo II Winner in Cohasset Race

The second race of the August Saturday series and the fifth of the Sunday series of the Cohasset Yacht Club were combined after Saturday's postponement and held yesterday in Cohasset harbor with a strong southwest wind prevailing.

Dean K. James sailed his Skiddoo II, which cleaned up at Marblehead, to a 25-second victory over George Vedeler's Tunipoo in the 21-footers and the closest contest of the day.

CALLAHAN IN TITLE BOUT TONIGHT

By JACK CONWAY

Andy Callahan of Lawrence will defend his title as New England lightweight champion against Sammy Fuller of the North End in a ten-round bout at the Marks Stadium at Tiverton, R. I., tonight.

The weight for the bout is 135 pounds which is the lightweight limit. As Fuller is always below this notch, Callahan's title will be at stake.

It will be the second meeting between Callahan and Fuller. Their first skirmish was staged in this city and resulted in a victory for Callahan after 10 hard rounds of milling.

Fuller made a rally in the last two rounds and almost cut down Callahan's early lead.

The winner of tonight's bout will be in line for matches with Senor Justo Juarez, Jack Berg and other leaders in the lightweight class.

Frankie Hennessey of Fall River will oppose Pancho Villa of New Bedford in the semi-final of six rounds.

In the other six rounders, Albion Holden of Attleboro will mingle with Johnny Hanlon of Lynn, Rudy Bauer of Jamaica Plain will clash with Freddy Bender of Newport, Whitey Hurwitz of Dorchester will tackle George LaBate of Brockton, while Dick Fusaro of Fall River will collide with Manny Burgess of Providence.

Lamar and Gallagher End Training for Go

Henry Lamar, Belmont heavyweight, and Marty Gallagher of Roxbury have ended training for their 10-round tussle which will take place at Braves Field tomorrow night under the direction of the Boston Garden.

The rival heavyweights will each scale in the vicinity of 190 pounds when they enter the ring.

It will be the third meeting between these rivals. The previous two contests were staged in Baltimore and resulted in victories for Lamar after close contests.

Lamar and Gallagher each claim they will win by a knockout tomorrow night.

Kearns' Heavyweight in Semifinal

Andy Mitchell of California, young heavyweight managed by Jack Kearns, will tackle Jack Dudley of Worcester, winner in the heavyweight class of the diamond belt tournament, in the semi-final of eight rounds. Mitchell takes the place of Buddy Hoeard who was dropped frm the card following a recent defeat.

Mitchell gave Jim Maloney plenty of opposition in a bout at the Garden, and will go to the post a favorite over Dudley.

Steve Gorman of South Boston and Terry Mitchell of Somerville will furnish the fireworks in another eight-round bout. Gorman and Mitchell furnished a slugging match when they collided in the diamond belt tournament. Gorman edged out his opponent and went into the final bout where he lost to Dudley.

Pat O'Flaherty of South Boston and Ug Gibson of Medford will trade blows in another eight, while Ring Larsen of Quincy, former national amateur middleweight champion, will make his Boston bow as a pro when he mingles with Roy Bailey of Charlestown.

HOPEDALES IN 11-6 VICTORY

HUB TWILIGHT LEAGUE

	W.	L.		W.	L.
Allston	14	6	Somerville	10	9
Newton	11	6	Jamaica	5	10
Revere	11	7	South Boston	5	11
Hyde Park	9	9	Mt. Hope	3	13

The Hopedales of Allston strengthened their position at the top of the Hub Twilight league by defeating Jamaica, 11 to 6. Gulusian starred with three hits and seven chances in the field for the winners.

Although outbatted more than two to one, Revere shut out Newton Upper Falls, 2 to 0, in a brilliant pitching duel between Walsh and Bridley. Walsh allowed only three hits, but one was a home run by Rose.

Hyde Park defeated the Somerville City Club, 8 to 4. The losers protested on the grounds that Hyde Park used three players who were not certified.

Plymouth, Aug. 25—In a return meet held at the Eel River Beach Pool, the Scituate Yacht Club swimming team for the second time defeated the Eel River swimmers to win the A. W. George cup here yesterday.

Cubs vs. A's in World Series

BOTH TEAMS SEEM SURE OF FLAGS

By JOE CASHMAN

The contenders in the 1930 World Series will be the same as last year, it appears. The Philadelphia Athletics made almost sure of their second successive participation in the fall classic several weeks back, while the Chicago Cubs as much as did the same by making it three out of four over the second-place New York Giants on the Sabbath and increasing their lead to five full games.

Of course, Washington and New York in the junior circuit and New York, Brooklyn, St. Louis and Pittsburgh in the senior loop still have a mathematical chance to win out but unless several miracles happen, the A's and Cubs should have little trouble maintaining their respective leads right down to the finish.

Joe Cashman

The collapse of the Giants in the crucial series in the Windy City was and wasn't surprising.

They had run wild through the West before hitting Chicago and had found little trouble beating the champions in previous series, which made their chances appear very bright, but they had also cracked several times earlier in the campaign when they had a chance to do things and go places, which indicated that they might do so again, as they did

Cubs Recovered From Many Misfortunes

Class is supposed to be all that counts in baseball, but courage and determination have proved of greater value in the National League scramble this season. They have carried the Cubs to a commanding lead over at least two teams that have more class—the Giants and Cardinals.

The loss at the very start of the race of Hal Carlson, star pitcher; Rogers Hornsby, baseball's greatest hitter, and Lester Bell, counted upon to be the regular third-sacker, changed the Cubs from an all-powerful into a mediocre outfit which should have been outdistanced before mid-season.

But at the same time these heavy blows instead of discouraging the champions made them all the more determined to win, and they went out and broke the spirit of one opponent after another until today they have the race as good as won.

Courage kept Brooklyn on the top for quite a spell, but even the Dodgers' amazing grit had to surrender before the Chicago brand shortly before the Giants learned that class couldn't overcome gameness.

The fall of the Giants is a sad blow to the magnates of both leagues. While the Athletics had robbed the American League race of all thrills even before mid-season, the struggle for supremacy in the National League was so hectic up to yesterday that the fans all over the two circuits remained interested in the pastime and kept turning out.

No Game in Hub Until Thursday

Now that the Cubs are five games in front the interest is as good as dead everywhere, and there will be few more large crowds at any parks except those of the A's and Cubs, unless the races should get close again, which is most improbable.

It's certain that nobody will attend big league baseball in the Hub before Thursday, at the earliest, for the very good reason that there won't be a game locally until that time.

The Red Sox have three open dates in a row which they will spend travelling to St. John, N. B., today, playing against the 'Twi' team there tomorrow evening and coming home on Wednesday.

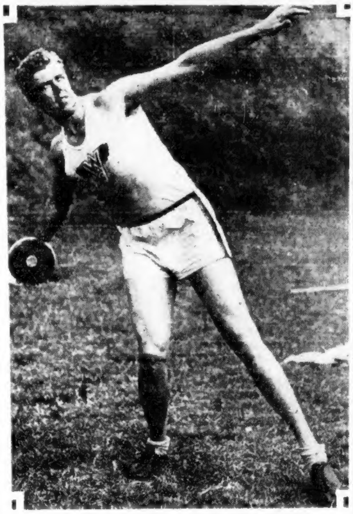
The champion Athletics will be here Thursday to open a three-game series. Friday being on open date, Ladies' Day will be observed on Thursday so that the fair sex may see the Mackmen during their last appearance of the season in the Hub.

45 to 1 Shot Wins Deauville Classic

Deauville, France, Aug. 25—G. Widenstein's Rieur three-year-old, won the grand prix Deauville worth half a million francs, yesterday.

Rieur, a 45 to 1 shot, easily beat the great French five-year-old, Motrico, and one of the best four-year-olds Le Chatelet, which ran second and third, respectively. Edouard de Rothschild's Godiche, the favorite, also ran. A field of 20 started.

GOLDEN COAST GIANT



PAUL JESSUP, representing the Washington A. C. of Seattle, who busted the world's record for the discus throw at the National A. A. U. games in Pittsburgh. Jessup hurled the saucer a distance of 169 feet 8⅞ inches to better the old standard set up by Eric Krenz by more than six feet. Jessup, six feet six inches in height and possessing a wonderful physique, is one of the best athletes on the Pacific slope.

Crow Indian Leads in N. A. A. U. Decathlon

Pittsburgh, Aug. 25 (AP)—Wilson Charles, Crow Indian from Haskell Institute, led the field of contenders for the National Amateur Athletic Union decathlon championship after two of the 10 events, the 100-meter dash and broad jump, had been run off today.

Charles had 1651.05 points. Everett Utterback, former University of Pittsburgh athlete was second with 1601.35 and Howard Jones of the New York A. C. third with 1563.20.

Utterback, the runner-up at this stage, suddenly withdrew at the start of the third event, the shot-put. The speedy negro athlete gave no reason for his decision to quit the grind.

The husky Robert easily led the pack in his specialty, the shot-put, with a heave of 48 feet, 10¾ inches, more than four feet ahead of his nearest rival, to boost his standing considerably.

JAMESTOWN IN HARD TEST

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 25 (US)—Jamestown, the champion of the two-year-olds, will get his real test Saturday in the Hopeful. This is the daddy of the juvenile events here, for the winner will draw down at least $56,000 for his trouble. It is the climax of a wonderful season, and if Jamestown triumphs then he will leave for the big town heralded as the wonder colt of the year.

In the Hopeful, Jamestown must concede from eight to 13 pounds to all his opponents. He must do this over six and a half furlongs, which is further than he has raced so far. It takes a real good youngster to win this event, but as Jamestown is all that he will probably score.

His victories in the Flash, United Hotel stakes, Saratoga special and the Grand Union Hotel stakes proves him a marvel.

Epithet is the unknown quantity Jamestown will face in the Hopeful. This is the Epinard-Fairy Wand colt that has only run once but won so easily he startled the onlookers.

The manner in which Epithet came thundering down the home stretch was a revelation to all. He is a big colt with a tremendous stride, plenty of finishing power, a grand colt any way you look at it.

MISS NUTHALL WINS U. S. NET TITLE

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 25 (US)—Betty Nuthall of England is the new queen of American tennis.

The 19-year-old marvel of the British courts won the United States honors, defeating Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper, of Oakland, Calif., 6—1, 6—4. The conquest carried the trophy away to foreign shores for the first time in the 43 years' history of the fixture.

As a 16-year-old girl, Miss Nuthall came to this country and reached the finals, only to lose to the former Helen Wills. Last year Miss Nuthall visited the Westside Tennis Club, only to fall before the onslaughts of Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, the one other European to succeed in these parts.

But on this occasion, with Mrs. Moody, the greatest of them all, resting in her native heath of California, Miss Nuthall finally attained her objective.

Behind Miss Nuthall's triumph over Mrs. Harper, that clever strategist from the West Coast, was a story of vindication for the hard-hitter from Great Britain. Back in the homeland Miss Nuthall had not been considered good enough to represent her nation in the Wightman Cup matches. There can be little doubt of a mistake in that omission now.

British Girl Crowded Mrs. Harper From Start

Armed with a racquet, a red bandeau about her forehead, and confidence, Miss Nuthall did not give Mrs. Harper much chance to frustrate elimination, crowding her opponent from the start and never relenting in the vigorous pressure of her offensive.

Just as she had dispatched Louise McFarland, Mrs. A. J. Lamme, Jr., Edith Cross, Dorothy Weisel and Marjorie Morrill, Miss Nuthall went by Mrs. Harper—in stride. In the first set, for instance, Mrs. Harper had few opportunities to do what she wanted—snatching a single game, the fifth, on service.

Miss Nuthall was zooming that ball directly to the lines, getting length and remarkable pace on her smashes and seldom, if ever, permitting Mrs. Harper to assail the net.

In the second set Mrs. Harper performed more capably, shunting aside some of the nervous tension that had characterized her early showing. When the Californian bowled along to a 4 to 2 lead, breaking Miss Nuthall's service in the fifth game it seemed as if Mrs. Moody's undefended laurels might yet be saved a 3000-mile journey across the Atlantic.

Not if Betty Nuthall could help it, though. In this emergency she brought to bear her entire ammunition, sweeping down in a row to balk her adversary. The seventh and tenth games were deuces and in the last game Mrs. Harper was a point from tying the set at 5—3. Whenever the important point was required, however, Miss Nuthall would lash out with a telling placement that caught Mrs. Harper hopelessly out of position, usually forcing the latter to shake her head sadly at the tragedy of things. The contest lasted 36 minutes.

Betty to Defend Crown Next Year

The distinction between Miss Nuthall's win and that of the Norwegian, Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, from an international viewpoint, is merely that Mrs. Mallory, unmarried in 1915, was living in America when she acquired the title. Mrs. Mallory, naturalized by marriage, also took the prize in 1920, 1921, 1922 and 1926 as a citizen under this flag.

Miss Nuthall, on her side, will go back to her native England shortly. She expects to ship here again in 1931, prepared for the assaults of Mrs. Moody or anyone else.

U. S. Wins Sloop Series With Canada

Seaside Park, N. J., Aug. 25—By gaining first and third places in the final race of the series, the United States, represented by the Barnegat Bay Yacht Racing Association, defeated Canada, 42 points to 37, in the eight-race international sloop series yesterday. It was America's first triumph in the series in four years.

Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

It seems fitting at this time, my gentles, to digress slightly from topics pertaining to gratis publicity for sundry radio entertainers, manufacturers, etc., and speak a word or two for our own Boston Evening American's studio and efforts on the air.

You all know, of course—at least we hope you do—that up on the fifth floor of this publication we have a regular, honest-to-goodness broadcasting studio, outfitted with every appliance and means to put on the air almost any kind of program that may be broadcast. This studio has been in operation for quite some time and affiliated with station WHDH.

But officials of the Hearst Publications are never satisfied with "almost as good" conditions; it is their aim in the newspaper world to produce a little better than the best, if that is at all possible, and so, realizing the ever-growing value of broadcasting, they have arranged a co-operative plan whereby Evening American programs will be put on the air over WLEX, as well as over WHDH.

That means something, folks! Can you point to any other newspaper in the country broadcasting over two stations? Yes, that's right, you can't. And with the facilities which such a powerful organization as this is can command, listeners-in have some rare treats in store.

It is still a little too early to acquaint you with the plans which the managing editors of the Evening American and the Sunday Advertiser have formulated, whereby you will be entertained over these two stations, but when managing editors get right down to work—and we can assure you they have put on high-pressure in plans for these stations—you may well believe there are bound to be good results.

After all, conducting a broadcasting studio is greatly a matter of intelligence; there is no secret in it. Its success depends mostly upon the directing genius behind it. And with such capable persons as managing editors interested in it, whose business in life is to please large numbers of citizens, you are going to find WLEX and WHDH worth while tuning in on.

With news coming into it from every corner of the world, at every hour of the day and night, from three great news services, the Evening American is especially well situated to keep the public posted on interesting information via the air. What is doing in the world of sports, finance and other lines of human endeavor is to be presented at appropriate intervals. Martha Lee's homemaking class, Ann Arden's hints on fashion, shopping with Priscilla, and other daily features. And, of special interest, is Beatrice Fairfax in her advice to the lovelorn.

We haven't room here to tell about the other entertaining features; there are plenty of them, however, and we advise you turn the old dial to WLEX, and listen to one of the programs.

The initial broadcast of a new program feature entitled "Scott Furriers' Sketch Book" will be presented Monday night at 6:45 over WBZ and WBZA. The "Sketch Book" will present unusual situations and the radio audience will be asked to assist in the solution of these extraordinary events. Each week Scott Furriers will present a prize of $10 to the individual who first submits the correct solution to the problem.

"Jimmie Doolittle, late of the U. S. Army Air Corps, and an outstanding contributor to aviation from the experimental flying angle, will present a short informal talk on the Sign of the Shell program over WEEI at 10:30 tonight. Following Doolittle's talk, the new features of the Shell program will express themselves. Art Kassell and his "Kassell's in the Air" orchestra will present peppy music, and Wendell Hall will act as host. Ray Perkins, the Old Topper, who always deserves special notice will present five minutes of patter and song in his characteristic manner with his amusing comments on timely events on the news.

The advance guard of new Fall programs is initiated over WEEI tonight at 9:30, when the General Motors Family Party start the series featuring the Revelers quartet and a specially organized string orchestra and Frank Black as conductor as well as piano soloist. Each week Black will be heard either in a concert number or an improvision on a popular song. This week he will take as his theme "What Is This Thing Called Love?" and improvise on it. The quartet will offer one of their best, Rachmaninoff's Prelude in C Sharp Minor, and James Melton steps from the group to solo-ize "Hills of Home."

Cup your ears to these tonight. STROMBERG CARLSON program over WBZA at 10 p. m. String music will play a part in the program and EILEEN [illegible] LONE will offer [illegible] melodies [illegible] beseio [illegible] LOMBARDO [illegible] his ROYAL CANADIANS play a previously [illegible] number on the Burns Panatela program over WNAC at 10 o'clock. The name is not divulged. A medley of U. of California songs will be offered . . . DR. SYLVESTER R. LEAHY, N. Y. police surgeon and expert on psychiatric problems, will be guest speaker on the WBZA 8:30 Crime Prevention program . . . HAYWOOD BROUN return from his three weeks' sleep at the mountains and once more provokes listeners over WNAC at 11:15 . . .

Store Clerks, Attention

"For two years I suffered with irregularities and finally had to leave school. I got no relief until my married sister told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking only two bottles I felt well. Since then I have been able to clerk in a store, on my feet all day and have suffered only once from my old trouble. I want other girls, especially store clerks, to know what it did for me."—Dorothy L. Fairchild, 924 Walnut Street, Freeland, Pennsylvania.

MARY PICKFORD ABANDONS STAGE PLANS TO MAKE 'TALKIE' FILM OF 'KIKI'

TEST WORK TO START SOON

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1930, Universal Service, Inc

Los Angeles, Aug. 25—Between watching Mary Pickford try on dresses for "Kiki" and going to court with her I had a busy afternoon. Douglas put his approval on a white evening dress, long and not too elaborate. The clothes of "Kiki," you remember, are extremely bizarre. Yes, Mary is actually going to do "Kiki." The rights were obtained last week and she begins making tests this coming week. The action will be laid in New York instead of Paris with Mary chattering in an accent learned from Maurice Chevalier.

David Belasco has always had a warm spot in his heart for Mary. He wanted her to come to New York so that he could rehearse her in the part and much as she said she would like his direction, she feels it is impossible to take that much time now. Sam Taylor will direct her and the search is on for a leading man.

Louella O. Parsons

Mary has put the New York stage idea out of her mind. She says she has read numberless plays Arch Selwyn has sent her but after thinking the situation over she believes the thing to do now is to make a talkie and make it right away.

* * *

The sprightly role of the daughter in "The Royal Family," played so effectively by Sylvia Field, will be given to Mary Brian. I hope Mary will put more animation into her acting than she usually does. She is sweet and pretty, but so placid that she hardly seems to be the type for this girl, full of energy, full of pep and always doing things. Of course, since Ann Harding created the role of Linda in "Holiday," we cannot say what these quiet girls can do if given a chance. Maybe all Mary needs is a chance to play something other than the sweet, demure bread and butter miss that has been her lot in so many pictures.

* * *

Carmelita Geraghty can easily be classed as one of the prettiest girls in Hollywood. Time was when Carmelita was a little plumpish, but now she is so sweet and slender that not even a microscope could detect an extra ounce of flesh. She has just been signed by Columbia to play the lead opposite Buck Jones in "Lawless Valley." Oh yes indeed, it is one of "them thar" Westerns with much riding, much lovemaking and many thrills. Lewis King directs. Carmelita also has the very interesting role that Dorothy Day created on the stage in "Fifty Million Frenchmen."

C. Geraghty

* * *

Pauline Garon's parlez vous Francais is doing well by her. Hal Roach heard her French accent and promptly signed her to play opposite Charley Chase in a series of French comedies. No trick for Pauline to talk French for she was raised in Canada and she is of French parentage. She learned French before she learned English. Polly says she never thought she'd live to see the day her French would be of any benefit to her on the screen, but then, who of us thought there would ever be talkies.

* * *

The health of Lew Cody, which again threatened to cause him trouble a few weeks ago, has improved again. He has been signed by Harry Cohn for a Columbia picture. I say a Columbia picture because it is problematic whether he will play in "Roseland" or "Madonna of the Streets." Columbia is certainly on a signing spree these days. They have been negotiating with Robert Ames, who is one of the most sought-after juveniles of the hour, since his excellent work in "Holiday."

* * *

Johnny Mack Brown will always be glad that he took his baby home for his father to see. Ever since the birth of the youngster he has planned to take Mrs. Brown and the baby to Alabama so the homefolks could see what a California-bred baby looks like. A month or so ago the three Browns traveled south and after a delightful visit started back. Before they were half-way home a telegram was received that his father had passed on. Johnny will always be glad that he took his baby south in time for his father to see her.

Gossip we hear in Hollywood is that one of the well known companies is dickering for the rights to "June Moon." That Fred Niblo has resigned from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Edward Robinson is departing eastward to be featured in "The Merchant of Paris," a New York stage play. That Lupe Velez and Gary Cooper are really going to take the fatal step in a few months. That after the talk of Gary's being an admirer of June Collyer, he and Lupe decided to get married. That Gloria Swanson has been talking contract with M. G. M. But so far nothing has materialized. All of this is chatter but what is more interesting than rumor?

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM: the MARQUIS DE FALAISE playing a game of miniature golf and losing to GEORGE FITZMAURICE. MOLLY O'DAY still thin, at the Cocoanut Grove. IRVING BERLIN back in Hollywood ready to begin work on "Reaching for the Moon." BLANCHE SWEET and MRS. HOLMES HERBERT, the former NELL INCE, resuming old friendships over the luncheon table. CONSTANCE BENNET proving that she is still in the juvenile stage by cutting a wisdom tooth. JACK Oakie dancing with a pretty girl at the Ambassador. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

On Fenway Reopening Bill

NINA OLIVETTE AND CHARLES RUGGLES

"QUEEN HIGH" is to be the feature film for the gala reopening of the Fenway, Friday. Nina Olivette and Charles Ruggles are shown in a scene from the film.

RAPID RISE IN FILMDOM

William Bakewell, featured as "Albert" in "All Quiet on the Western Front," now at the Uptown and Olympia, has had a remarkable career in pictures. He began four years ago as an extra and rose to feature parts in such films as "The Iron Mask," in which he played the dual role of Louis XI and his twin brother, in "On With the Show," with Alice White in "Hot Stuff" and "Playing Around," in "West Point," in "The Gold Diggers of Broadway," and in "Annapolis." He is 22. He was born in Los Angeles and attended the grammar school in that city, graduating from the Harvard Military school there.

Publix Egyptian to Reopen Saturday

The Publix Egyptian will reopen next Saturday, at 1 p. m. with new policy of a first-run, double feature program. While the theater was closed many innovations were added. The sound and projection have been greatly improved.

The management announces that the opening bill will have "Holiday," featuring Ann Harding, Mary Astor, Robert Ames, Edward Horton, and Hedda Hopper. This picture is excellent entertainment for all. The co-feature will be Jack Mulhall in "The Fall Guy."

The policy is as follows: Saturdays and holidays continuous from 1 to 11 p. m. Sundays continuous from 3 to 11 p. m. Weekly matinees from 2 to 5 p. m. Week day evenings from 8 to 11 p. m.

FLYING BAND MAKES HIT AT K-A

The Cast

Sally Wayne	Betty Compson
Gregory Sloane	Hugh Trevor
Tom Austen	Lowell Sherman
Madeline Austen	Rita La Roy
Mischa Kawelin	Ivan Lebedeff
Paul Cooper	Raymond Hatton
Harriet Cooper	Marcelle Corday
Louise Hollister	June Clyde
Barker	Sidney D'Albrook
Rogers	Wilhelm Wesley Burt

RKO again puts forth a splendid variety show on the Keith-Albee stage. On screen appears Betty Compson in "Midnight Mystery," which furnishes fair entertainment. But the doings back of the footlights are the thing this week. Headliners are the Curtiss-Wright Flying Band, a very clever musical unit.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA DOESN'T limit itself to its tone output, but exhibits showman skill in bringing certain incidentals to bear. These help build up the atmosphere. There is a number of novelties, several classy enough to be called distinctive. These players are all aviators, which fact becomes very evident as their act proceeds. One would think the world were air-minded with a vengeance, from the way the band wins favor. On their program are popular pieces, and a highlight is the introduction of an illusion of seven planes flying in mass formation. They call this "The March of the Dawn Patrol."

Rita La Roy

* * *

THE BILL HAS OTHER good entertainment. Here is Britt Wood again. He shows up this time as a country laddie, very comical, and good with his harmonica. He gets a lot of laughs. More fun follows when Dick Nash and [illegible] Fately trapse in view. There is comedy and song. The Three Tanzolas dance mighty well. And after them come the Misses [illegible] and [illegible] to show athletic prowess. And in fine form too.

* * *

SO GOOD IS THE STAGE section of the program that one can forgive the drawbacks of the feature picture, "Midnight Mystery," an adaptation of "Hawk Island," stage play. There is New England interest, for the isle is supposed to be off the Maine coast. Lowell Sherman does a good job. Others seen in support of the star are Rita La Roy, June Clyde, Ivan Lebedeff and Raymond Hatton.

Seven Acts Featured on Scollay Program

On the stage at the Scollay there is a new vaudeville show starting today. Seven acts are booked, including Radcliffe and Todd in "Dark Doings," Frank and Warren Lassiter in "The Two Laff Savers," Renard and West in "Hopping Off," and Dave Gould's versatile Scollayettes. Charlie Frank and his orchestra continue as favorites.

WON HER ROLE FROM FIELD OF 35

Dorothy Jordan, the five-foot-two bit of loveliness in the heroine role of Ramon Novarro's latest romance, "Call of the Flesh," at Loew's State this week, is the [illegible]-year-old musical comedy player who won the leading feminine role in Novarro's "Devil-May-Care" from a list of applicants which numbered more than 35 of the screen's leading beauties.

Miss Jordan was born at Clarksville, Tenn. She enrolled for the courses offered at the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York and applied for a role as a singer in "Funny Face," a new musical comedy which at that time was in rehearsal. They let her sing a couple of numbers and featured her in the billing. She "got over" very successfully. Then she rose rapidly.

Bowdoin Sq. Theater

At the Bowdoin Square, beginning today, the top feature will be Greta Garbo in "Romance." Another feature will be "Sweethearts and Wives." Another film will present Gus Edwards and Jack Benny in "Song Writers' Revue," and high grade selected vaudeville features will hold forth. A special added feature every Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Bowdoin will offer Rin Tin Tin in the sensational serial production, "The Lone Defender."

Gleason and Armstrong in Eddie Quillan Film

James Gleason and Robert Armstrong have been added to the cast of "Lookin' for Trouble," Eddie Quillan's next starring picture. Walter de Leon and Russell Mack have fashioned script about a messenger for a broker's office who innocently becomes involved in an underworld racket.

Bori Faints as Lazzari Hurls Her Up in Opera

Chicago, A[illegible] (AP) Virgilio Lazzari, the basso, was a bit rough again Saturday and Lucrezia Bori missed the first curtain call of her [illegible] seasons at Ravinia.

Mme. Bori, Metropolitan opera prima donna, was singing Fiora in "The Love of Three Kings." Lazzari was Fiora's father. In the final scene the father, before singing his exit, picks up his dead daughter, throws her over his shoulder, and then lays her down on a bench. But Lazzari was too rough.

Mme. Bori fainted. Those in the wings noticed it, but not Lazzari. He finished the aria, picked up Fiora's body and [illegible] off stage.

The curtain parted for Bori's call, but she had not been revived.

You'll Have a Good Time—and Lots of Fun

drinking from those glasses I saw in Filene's Gift Shop today! They're imported from Czecho-Slovakia—and they're positively the most amusing things I've seen in many a moon. After the morning doing nothing but gaze at tall—short and medium-sized glasses used for ginger ale, grape juice, or what have you? I've been longing for a nice tall glass of sparkling icy spicy ginger ale! Just wait until you see those tall, oh! so tall high ball glasses marked to test your capacity. I'll try to tell you about them—Anne, but you really must go in and see them. The glass has four rungs—When you start drinking you'll be "high and dry" as dry as the camel painted at the first rung. If you reach the second you'll be just starting to make a "jack-ass" of yourself—At least, that's what you'll find there—The third shows you're making a "p-i-g-Hog" of yourself—and if you struggle to the last you'll find yourself "strutting your stuff" and "Crowing," a Bantam rooster is painted at this rung. If you reach "bottoms-up"—you'll probably discover you've made a monkey of yourself and you'll see a most realistic "monk" painted there. They're grand thirst-quenchers and they cost but $1 each! There are Czecho-Slovakian iced tea sets marked at the very special price of $3.85—Others from $7.50 to $17. You'll find them in Filene's Gift Shop, street floor, Franklin street entrance.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Catherine Paige, elder daughter in a fatherless home, secures her first position in the office of Alfred A. Farnsworth, successful engineer. In the office she meets Gordon Moore, and is instantly attracted to him, and he to her. He easily persuades her to spend the rest of the day "celebrating" with him.

At the end of an innocent and delightful day of lunching and sightseeing with him, Cathie finds herself deposited at her door, and nonchalantly bidden goodbye.

Her pride comes to her rescue, she manages to seem as nonchalant as he, but after he is gone she weeps in secret at the speedy end to what she had girlishly felt would be a lasting love.

In the office several days later she learns from a gossipy office boy that Farnsworth's attractive secretary, Marsha Darrow, is not only "setting her cap" for him, but carrying on a flirtation with Moore.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 5

"DON'T LET those men make any advances," Cathie's mother warned her, getting her off on time to work every morning, reminding her to take a clean handkerchief, and to buy something sensible for lunch. "Not just an ice cream soda and a hunk of French pastry, do you hear me, Cathie?"

Cathie heard. Heard with the half conscious hearing that comes of listening to the same old thing over and over. Sometimes she laughed to herself, not very happily, thinking of all the worry the family went to for nothing.

Mr. Farnsworth was friendly enough, but he said very little, and even when he praised her work, or made a little joke, it was from a great distance. He was Alfred A. Farnsworth, and he didn't want anyone to forget it. The engineers who drifted in and out of the office looked at her sometimes, but no one introduced them, and the other girls and Miss Darrow laughed and chatted with them, and left her out.

Stylish Garb

The other girls had such nice clothes. Especially Miss Darrow. Miss Darrow wasn't really pretty, but she was certainly stylish. Sometimes she was a vision in grass green, with woven green sandals that exactly matched. Some days she was in pale yellow with a blazer sweater of orange and maize. "Mr. Browning would never tolerate such clothes on a girl working in his office," Ruth said severely, when Cathie rather wistfully described the fetching costumes.

Cathie blushed. She didn't want Ruth to know that she would have liked such things for herself. Cathie's working hadn't helped home finances very much, though she turned over all but a few dollars to ma. Half unconsciously Ruh had relaxed, had given up some of the fierce economy that she had practiced for so long. And of course Cathie had insisted upon ma stopping work. The apron and soft shoes never went out in the brown paper parcel any more.

There was Jean, too. Jean, the baby, turning into a young lady, growing into beauty with astounding rushes. She was such a sweet child, so warm and affectionate and loving, and oh dear, so expensive!

Home Problems

Schools had gymnasiums and special courses now. That meant special clothes. "It's a good thing they didn't have such nonsense when you girls were young," Mary Paige told Ruth and Cathie. But she was secretly pleased with it all, and so were they, though sometimes the price of a tennis racket or new gymnasium shoes meant putting off the grocer or letting the gas bill run.

Eddie was a problem, too. So tall and blond and handsome, so like his dead father that his mother's heart ached every time she looked at him, and she said to the girls, "Leave him alone. He's young yet. Before you know it he'll be working and making more than the lot of you put together!"

Eddie was bright and willing enough, but the sort who never quite gets a job. By the time he heard there was an opening somewhere it was filled. He'd come home quietly and settle himself to read.

"Did you try that broker's office, Eddie?"

"The job, Eddie, the one you—"

Job, at Last

It worried them. Worried them all frightfully. So it was a real relief when Frank Prout's uncle got him a job on a boat. He shipped on the Phoenix, a freighter bound for South America.

Summer passed. Fall came and the rains. The roof leaked again and ma decided it had to be fixed. Fall meant warmer clothes, too. So much more costly than summer rayons that you can pick up on the remnant counter for almost nothing. In the minutes, hours sometimes, that Cathie had nothing to do in the office, she would take out pencil and paper and figure. Figure the cost of things . . . taxes, middie tie, face powder, rouge—question mark after the rouge. She didn't really need it, but it would be nice to have it in a little box . . . Shoes, carpenter for the back steps, winter coat for ma . . . and where was the money?

"I guess I'm getting too businesslike to day-dream any more," Cathie thought. "I guess I don't imagine things any more, the way I used to."

"Did the man who gave you the chocolates ever come back?" the family used to ask, and "I hope you never run across that Mr. Moore again, it might be awkward for you, dear." But they hardly ever asked any more. Cathie's little adventure was over.

Gordon Spokesman

Yes it was over. Cathie knew it now. She knew all about Gordon Moore, and the Moore Brothers. There was hardly a day in the office that his name was not mentioned. The Moore Brothers, it seemed built many of the bridges, dams and tunnels that Vaughan and Farnsworth designed. They were contractors for the Peacock Dam, one of the biggest projects in the office. They talked in millions, and though Gordon was many years younger than his brother, it was he who was usually their spokesman, he who signed their letters, he who people wanted to see. Even the innocent and inexperienced Cathie knew that men like that aren't likely to be seriously interested in office girls.

Once it had been a thrill to pore over the papers that Gordon Moore had handled. To type his name on an envelope, to look through the files for his letters, signed in his stubby, firm hand. But that was all over now. She had even given the candy box, the beautiful orchid moire box he had given her to Jean. Jean had begged for it, and she had given it up. It was a kind of satisfaction to do it. It made her feel independent. He wasn't the only one who could have a good time for a day, and forget Bobbie Timkin, the red-headed

New Beacon Street Accepted

OPEN ARTERY TO MOHAWK TRAIL

Officials See Mayor Murphy of Somerville Formally Take Over Remade Highway

In the presence of officials of Somerville, the Metropolitan Planning Board and the Elevated, Beacon st., Somerville, resurfaced and forming a new motor artery north and west of Boston, was accepted today.

Car tracks have been removed and the road has been rebuilt forming a first-class motor highway from Inman sq., Cambridge, through a part of Somerville, to Porter sq., North Cambridge, and the Mohawk Trail.

As a result it is expected that much of the traffic which now congests Massachusetts ave. will be diverted to Beacon st.

Beacon st. connects at Inman sq. with Cambridge and Hampshire sts., tracks having also been removed from the latter so that motorists may now drive from Kendall sq. to Porter sq. without encountering trolley cars.

The project completes a plan of the Metropolitan planning board for new routes north and west of Boston and marks the first step in a program of development sponsored by Mayor John J. Murphy. Incidentally, it is the first street completed under a Democratic administration in the history of Somerville.

Mayor Murphy accepted the street in the presence of Henry I. Harriman, chairman of the Metropolitan planning board, who is also an Elevated trustee; Chief Engineer Fellows of the board, City Engineer Philip Walsh, Supt. of Streets Robert W. Houley and Supt. of Maintenance H. M. Stewart of the Elevated.

Welcomed Back Home to Boston

MAY PUT BRIDGE OVER TRACKS

The Boston Transit Commission was today requested by Mayor Curley to inquire into and report to him on the advisability of erecting a foot bridge across the tracks of the rapid transit system between Columbia and Savin Hill stations.

Last week a boy making his way across the tracks between stations escaped death when he ventured near a live rail there. Following a confrence with General Manager Dana today the Mayor stated that the Boston Elevated Company erected a six foot fence along the tracks for the purpose of keeping persons off. The Mayor believes that if an investigation reveals that many persons cross the tracks between stations a footbridge should be erected.

Eagle Perches Upon a Pole in Stoughton; Flees to Woods

An American eagle with a wing spread of nearly six feet alighted on a telegraph pole on Morton st., Stoughton, today and was observed by many pedestrians.

Its presence was first noticed by Mrs. Margaret Keyser and Mrs. Laura Johnston. No effort was made to capture the bird and it later disappeared in the woodland.

200 Feet of Live Wire Curls in Boylston St.

Motorists and pedestrians in Boylston st. had a narrow escape today when 200 feet of trolley wire snapped and fell into the street near the B. U. School of Business Administration.

'TOY GUN' MAN GETS 3 MONTHS

Wellington Graham, 30, of Albion st., South End, arrested on a charge of being a toy pistol "hold-up man," in Municipal Court today was sentenced to three months after being found guilty of assault and battery by Judge Adlow. He appealed.

Graham had "held" up two houses, according to police, but his gun proved to be a water pistol.

His first visit was at 30 Seneca st., the apartment of Miss Hazel Roberts, but he was scared away.

Next he made his way to No. 34, and forced an entrance to an apartment occupied by nine gypsies, including three children. One of the latter ran out and hailed a passing auto which proved to be that of the bureau of criminal investigation with Patrolmen McDonald, Donovan and Ahern aboard.

Mrs. Fay Elected

Mrs. Joseph Fay of Cambridge was elected secretary of the Brant Rock Social Club at a meeting at the Marshfield Inn, Marshfield. The club calendar closes Labor Day with a carnival at the home of Mrs. Fay.

VICTIM OF AUTO WORE 2 SKIRTS

The unidentified woman killed by an automobile Friday night when crossing at Washington and Kneeland sts. on a green light wore two dresses and only one stocking, Medical Examiner Timothy Leary revealed today.

The outer dress was black and the under, gray and black plaid. A black cotton stocking was on the right leg and the feet were encased in high laced shoes.

The woman was about 60 years old with gray hair, 4 feet 10 inches tall, with blue eyes and no teeth. She wore a black coat with satin faced collar and carried a Lowell commutation ticket expiring Aug. 13.

CEDRIC LANDS 300 IN HUB

The White Star liner Cedric which arrived in Boston last night, but delayed its docking until this morning, was an hour late due to fog. It brought 894 passengers from Liverpool, Galway and Queenstown, 300 of them for Boston, the rest for New York.

Mary and Rose Fitzgerald, daughters of Henry Fitzgerald, a brother of ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, arrived after a tour of the continent.

When the Cedric reached her dock an ambulance was waiting to take Miss Alice Funk, a passenger, of Indiana, from the liner. She was stricken with appendicitis when the liner was 200 miles at sea and a wireless message summoned the ambulance to the dock. She was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital. Her condition is not serious.

WANTS WARY VICTIMS TO TESTIFY

Has Commissioner Waiting to Take Testimony in the Tip Sheet Cases

In an attempt to round up reluctant Massachusetts witnesses for evidence in stock fraud cases, Watson Washburn deputy attorney-general of New York State, arrived in Boston today.

Process-servers from New York, having failed to locate elusive witnesses desired in New York prompted Washburn to come to enlist the aid of the Massachusetts authorities.

He is to confer with Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner at the State House to see if Massachusetts summonses can be issued for the witnesses, so that they may be haled before F. Delano Putnam in the Statler Building, acting as commissioner for the New York authorities.

MEETS TARR AND HULL.

Washburn is also to confer with John C. Hull, director of the Department of Public Utilities and with U. S. Dist. Atty. Frederick H. Tarr, the latter conference apparently dealing with use of mails by tipster sheets.

"We had planned to have the Massachusetts witnesses examined before F. D. Putnam, sitting commissioner at the Statler building, if our men had been successful in locating them," said Washburn at Hotel Lenox. "But the witness could not be found.

"William L. Jarvis of the Boston brokerage firm of W. L. Jarvis & Co. is one of the witnesses sought. He is named with Leonrad S. Rollnick and Abner S. Werblin in a civil suit which the attorney general of New York has brought, and we desire his testimony. He is reported to be at sea on his private yacht.

"Rollnick and Werblin are defendants in the attorney-general's suit. Jarvis is said to have been associated with them. We have no power to compel a Boston or Massachusetts witness to answer our summons. It would be purely voluntary on their part.

"That is why we thought Attorney-General Warner might assist us if summonses were issued by a Massachusetts court.

Are You a Victim?

If you have been victimized by stock swindlers, the Boston Evening American, co-operating with Government, State and County officials, will be glad to advise you what is best to be done. Write to the Boston Evening American Stock Fraud Bureau, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, giving all the circumstances. Such information will be held confidential.

Five New Dance Steps for Ballroom Fans

The five new dances chosen by the Dancing Masters of America at their convention forecast a busy season for Boston ballrooms.

Those five types of dancing are adapted to the new dance music that permits more grace with slower tempos while retaining [illegible] steps for those who have been accustomed to the fast music of the past three seasons.

They are the fast fox trot, the slow fox trot, the tango, the new dream or hesitation waltz and a novelty called the "speakeasy promenade."

OLD STEPS MADE OVER

The latest is really an elaboration of an old step, in the opinion of Louis Lerner, Boston dance teacher, who has just returned from the convention held in the Hotel Commodore, New York.

"The styles adopted lend themselves to the more crowded ballrooms that prevail nowadays," Lerner said. "And with the new dress styles, grace is once more in fashion. Jazz is declining rapidly."

The older people dance far more gracefully than collegiates, is the opinion of Lerner, who declares that with constant dancing from childhood up the taste of young people is developed for better music and this is in turn interpreted in finer dancing as they grow older.

FOR YOUNG AND OLD

The slow fox trot, known as the "university drag," is adapted to dancing by both the old and young on account of the possibility of its being executed in the conservative as well as the collegiate style [illegible] dragging the feet sideways [illegible] front in the fox trot steps.

The new waltz has a smooth gliding motion with long [illegible] and [illegible] lines. [illegible] and turning movements [illegible] graceful, and was [illegible] the long evening gowns.

[illegible] tango may be danced to [illegible] interpretation as always [illegible] when it comes to describing the novelty known as the "speakeasy promenade," one has to [illegible] imagination [illegible] to how such a promenade is usually conducted. Variety marks these steps.

THANK COP FOR SWIM REPORTS

The perseverance of radio engineers and the advice of a metropolitan policeman made possible the broadcasting of the Boston Evening American's girls' swimming meet last Saturday.

It was the first time a sporting event of this kind was broadcast and never were the elements so unkind to an aquatic event and never did so many unforeseen and unfortunate occurrences interfere with a radio program.

Arthur S. Roberts, Newcomb F. Thompson and Wm. Martin were to describe the exciting [illegible] and thrilling dives of the [illegible] from the float, but the wind and rain upset these plans. Two [illegible] came and went. Two shirts arrived and departed. Two forty-five was just about to do likewise when an unidentified policeman came forward with the suggestion that an automobile be run down on the esplanade to shelter the sensitive microphone.

Winners were lifted from the choppy waters of the Charles and ushered up the gangplank to the improvised studio on wheels to tell WLEX listeners just how it felt to be a winner.

CHARGE OFFICER TOOK BRIBE

Charged with accepting a $10 bribe in a [illegible] case, Patrolman Patrick J. Kelleher of the Central station in Cambridge has been suspended, it was announced today by Police Chief John J. McBride.

The suspension followed an investigation into a liquor raid in [illegible] Cambridge [illegible] by Patrolman Kelleher and other officers.

After [illegible] Terry and Salem [illegible] had been convicted on [illegible] July [illegible] Monday [illegible] informed [illegible] Patrolman Kelleher [illegible]

An investigation was begun [illegible] Kelleher will be given a hearing Wednesday.

Y. M. C. A. Lodger Jailed for Theft

Arne Thyden, 37, a Y. M. C. A. lodger in Quincy, was sentenced to six months in Dedham jail today after he had been found guilty of the theft of two watches from Oliver [illegible] and Thomas Seger, other Y. M. C. A. lodgers.

Things of interest are happening all about us if we are alert enough to see them. For example consider the following items, all of which appear in a single issue of the Ashland, Ohio Gazette under the heading of "Keeners Run Correspondence by Charles Shutt."

Doc Diddle south of the Run, Mrs. Sidney Diddle and two daughters Helen and Nell from the same place, were all seen crossing Keeners Run last Monday.

Mrs. Shirley Diddle and two daughters from south of the Run were doing some shopping Tuesday.

Doc Diddle was seen crossing Keeners Run Wednesday.

Doc Diddle, wife and two daughters Helen and Nell south of the Run, was away Thursday evening and on their way home stopped and talked to your Scribe a few minutes.

The parties that drew the gas out of Doc. Diddle's Buick car had better come and settle before the grand jury meets. Doc knows who you are and will make it hot for you if you don't settle it before long.

Mrs. Shirley Diddle, from south of the Run and two children, Helen and Nell and Doc Diddle south of the Run were all seen crossing Keeners Run Friday.

For to be thus well entertained

DOUBLING for LOVE by WINIFRED VAN DUZER

Chapter 29

KIT CAMP told her that she made him think of his wireless. Spitting and sputtering brightest thing in the world most interesting.

"But you've no right to tell me so."

"I'm responsible when you're with me. It's my right to look out for you."

"I'm used to looking out for myself I'll have you know. I can do it, too."

"Nicer to let me, though, eh, what? Don't be too modern. Girls ought to cling a bit. Half a girl's charm is to know how to cling and do so closely."

"Indeed! Like to think yourself a sturdy oak, I see."

He patted her shoulder, grinned delightedly, called her "kitten." "Clawing kitten. Thanks for a delightful time. I'll remember today, Judy Rivers that won't mix you in Notre Dame. . . . Little furry kitten. . . . ."

Judy Sorry

Admits Kit Was Right

All in a breath her irritation was gone: she clung to his hand. "I'll remember you, too. You were right about the wine. I'm sorry."

"Ah—no need. Must go and hang around the job now."

"But I thought you were off duty in port? You said the wireless practically closed when the ship ties up."

"This is special. A leaf for your book of adventure." He laughed at her surprise as they hesitated by the companionway. "Oh, keep this to yourself, Judy, that there's anything unusual on."

Of course. Is it—something truly exciting? Police? Secret service? All the secret adventures of the other Judy came rushing into her thought; she was in a flutter.

He said very soberly, "You'll take care? This is important."

"Trust me! Good - night, Sparks."

"Rather have 'Kit' from you."

"Kit, dear—good night"——

He gave her his casual nod turning away. As on the first evening she spent with him, when he left her with that careless bob of his head she felt dissatisfied. Restless and dissatisfied. She didn't know why. If he had kissed her [illegible] have sl[illegible]d him. Tris [illegible] had [illegible]d her and she was [illegible] Rowe to go scattering [illegible] here and there.

Besides she did not wish Kit Camp to kiss her. She was sure of this. Adorable big boy—she liked him—probably she'd never like anyone so much again. But it was a different liking from her liking of Tris. The sparkle that ran through her at Tris Millet's touch—deep, awakening, music vibrating so—Kit could not make her feel this.

[illegible] in love with Tris?

She [illegible] little shiver and kept f[illegible] the cabin, taking up a book, putting it down again; listening to belated passengers coming aboard first arguing with taxi men, often in thick, tipsy voices.

Peggy had not returned at one o'clock. Mr. Tennant had said they would go somewhere to dance and Judy was not to wait up for her mother. Judy touched her mother's toilet things in a lingering thoughtful way, put her robe and slippers out where they would be ready.

Little Ma—frivolous and joyous and irresistible—how game she had been. It seemed a great while ago now that Judy used to tell herself that perhaps she would have to marry some day for Peggy's sake. Peggy wished it so, always contriving to put her in the way of meeting boys, thinking her little schemes clever and deep.

That worry was over. All very plain how Mr Tennant felt about Peggy. Judy could go ahead now, plan her life as she pleased. Yet she didn't feel as happy as she should.

She turned out the light, sat in the darkness trying to grow drowsy. And finally caught up a wrap, went out to the boat deck, strolled toward the stern.

A spark glowed and dimmed—glowed and dimmed—in the shadow there. Someone tossed the cigarette overboard, called softly, "Judy."

"It's you, Tris? Why I didn't know——"

He swept her in his arms; his lips loitered on her hair, her eyes, her throat. "Judy—Judy—didn't want to do this—swore I'd never fall in love! Do you love me, Judy? A little? Tell me this, my sweet—only a quarter as much as I love you?"

Flame touched her, set a wild joy winging in her heart. She reached her hand to his neck, pulled his head down. Their kiss seemed to bind her spirit to his, to waft them away into some far place of dear, ecstatic radiance.

"You do care! Say it, my sweet—that you do love me—"

Overpowered and stilled with the rush of feeling, she could only shake her head, murmuring, "I don't know—don't know—"

"Beautiful darling, you will. I'll teach you this—" He pressed her hands in a warm, eager way, put his face down to hers, kept whispering glowing, tender things.

When four bells tinkled from the bridge he took her in, and once again she sat in the dark, though now it seemed as if all about her was golden light.

Visits Kit

In Wireless Room

Peggy came an hour later, rippling with gayety and champagne. And now Judy pretended to be sleepy, lest Peggy chatter all the rest of the night. And presently she did sleep, to dream that she was walking with Tris up the center aisle of Notre Dame. But Kit Camp's voice kept calling, "Wait, Judy—you can't do that! I'm responsible, and you can't do that."

It seemed to be this voice which awakened her in the morning. The ship was afloat now, moving slowly up the river in a gray, misty rain. Judy dressed and went down to breakfast without awakening Peggy.

There was almost no one in the dining room.

"A gay night for most folks," Cap'n Charley observed, shaking his head. "Funny how they feel about liquor. Not satisfied unless they swim in it."

Decks, too, were deserted. Finally Judy wandered around to the wire room, and there found Kit Camp nodding over his table.

"I say! Clever of you to pop in. Doyle' laid out and I've got to stick another hour."

He cleared papers from a chair, and she sat down, while he explained the instrument to her. He looked white and worn, and she felt a new admiration for him. Keeping on in such a matter-of-fact way, he was wonderful. If only they wouldn't quarrel.

Presently a boy brought some messages and while Kit fussed at his key Judy picked up a newspaper from the pile on the floor. It was a Montreal paper, brought aboard last night and Judy saw that now the Covington jewel robbery was back on the first page. It was established that "Sisters Three," the trio of emeralds had been taken to America, the dispatch read. This narrowed the search and solution of the mystery robbery, which had stirred the imagination of the entire world, was promised shortly.

There followed a description and history of the jewels, together with an account of other daring robberies, a list of murders connected with precious stones and of the misfortunes which seemed to attend them.

Tris was watching her when she finished reading. "That interests you, Judy?"

"Of course. You're interested, too—I can see that."

He shrugged and began to talk of Kerbulu's. "When we get to New York I'll take you to a place as quaint as anything in Montreal."

She wondered if she should tell him about Tris. After all what was there to tell? That Tris had said he loved her—that he didn't wish to love anyone, but he loved her, nevertheless?

"Something wrong, Judy? Bothered?"

Why did Kit look at her so? "You're a mind reader? I didn't think you'd do that to people."

"Only some people, kitten."

She jumped up and said she must go back to Peggy. He gave her his quick nod as she closed the door.

Peggy was gone but the stateroom was filled with flowers. A note with them: "I'm in the library, my sweet—waiting for you—loving you."

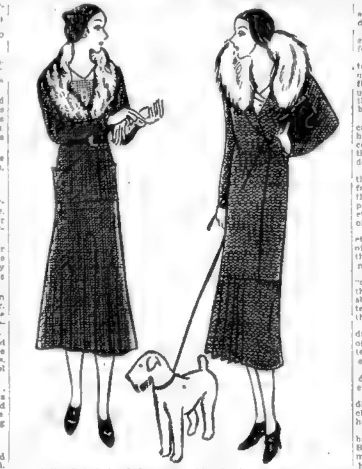
Wat's in Fashion?

In-Between-Season Tweed Suits

Directed by AMOS PARRISH



NEW YORK, Aug. 25— Forty minutes past summer and not quite quarter of fall. What to wear at such an hour?

Sun and wind at their old argument as to which is stronger. Wraps on, off, gone and back again in quick change time.

Reason enough for the tweed suits already dotting the avenues . . . . and that you'll see more of in another couple of weeks. For a tweed suit is a "compromise costume."

Tweeds and Fall—Partners

Tweed suits and fall just naturally go together. They harmonize. Ensemble well! Better than ever this year . . . because tweed colorings are so much pleasanter.

More like fall colors in their artistic blendings. Nature's colors never clash . . . even when they contrast. Nor do the colors of the most-in-fashion fall tweeds.

They blend so closely they often give the effect of being one color. Sometimes they are one color—the newer, smart monotone, or one-tone tweeds, instead of mixtures.

The browns and the brown and beige mixtures are one good choice to make. They're warm colors. They make you feel good on cool days.

Blue tweeds are fashionable . . . as are all blue materials. Red is fine, too, especially when combined with a beige or brown undertone. Or when they make sporty looking contrasts with white.

Two Good Types

There are two types of tweed suits you're going to see this fall. We've had both sketched for you.

One is the suit with the three-quarter length coat (shown on the right of the two figures). And the other, the short jacket suit that's a great favorite for informal country and sports wear.

They can be collared with fur—or not. Both ways are smart. And when they're not—you've a fine chance to use a gay silk scarf or one of the flat, tailored fur ones that make such good-looking cravats.

The Shoes for Tweeds

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

OH, LORD, hear now our supplication and deliver us from all PESTS

For a sinner may sin only once in a lifetime; but a pest stingeth, today, yesterday and forever.

From cut-worms and rose-bugs and mosquitoes and hot weather deliver us!

From cynics and hay-fever and egotists and practical jokers, defend us!

From the thrower of cold water, who dampen our spirits, quench our hopes and put out the flame of our enthusiasm, oh spare us! For they see only the clouds, the blow-outs, the dust and the bumps in the road.

From the telephone-talker that calleth up in the midst of business hours and hangeth upon the receiver until the arm acheth the ear tireth and the soup boileth over, deliver us.

From the affliction who readeth the newspaper aloud at the breakfast table, oh save us! And from the woman who foldeth the newspaper the wrong way and crusheth it, so that none may read it, oh set us free!

From the radio hound, who turneth on the loud-speaker at break of day and permitteth it to smite the ears of his neighbors until midnight.

From the "honest friend" and the "conscientious critic" who pricketh the bubbles of our dreams and shattereth our illusions, who putteth us down, and filleth us with the inferiority complex. . .

From the hypochondriac, who discourseth, throughout the meal, of his pangs and sufferings and telleth ALL the details of his operations.

From the dyspeptic who sniffeth doubtfully at his food and destroyeth the appetite

From the woman on a reducing diet, who turneth the feast into a clinic, and filleth the souls of the hearty with fear . .

From the "globe-trotter," just back from Paris, who quoteth his Baedecker morning and night, and maketh the thirsty to suffer with his boastings of French wines and German beer and English ale. . .

From gossip with the serpent's tongue, who goeth her way wrecking reputations and destroying the peace of the innocent. . .

Beatrice Fairfax Goes on the Air Tonight

BEATRICE FAIRFAX will discuss a problem of heart and home every night, at 6:35 p. m. over station WLEX. Tonight's problem follows:

"Lover in Despair"

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I love a girl but she has left me to go around with other fellows to have a good time. The last time we went out she said she still loved me, but not as much as she did at first. I said that if she went out with other fellows I would not go with her or speak to her. She said at first she would not go out with others, but after another call she said she would not go steady with any one, not even me. We separated and have met several times, but neither of us has spoken. I find that I love her more and more, but she doesn't seem to worry or care to call me. Should I call or write to her or wait for her to do so? When we parted I said if she wanted to come back to call me up and let me know. Which shall I do?

Beatrice Fairfax

LOVER IN DESPAIR

Dear Lover in Despair: I will discuss your problem over station WLEX at 6:35 tonight.

Wants a "Steady"

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am writing to you to see if you can help me. I would like very much to make a steady friend of a man who works with me. I have been out with him a few times, but he never makes a definite date with me. I think he likes me a little. He is 26. I am 18. He has been very nice to me. What can I do to win him?

EMERALD

Dear Emerald: Why try to rush matters? Many men prefer to take their own time about dating a girl up, and the first signs of eagerness on the girl's part scares them off. Be properly appreciative, dress daintily and make him feel that [illegible] the [illegible] person [illegible] Be- [illegible] anything.

Still on the Edge

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

[illegible] who [illegible] words of life [illegible] fell [illegible] felt in [illegible]

KITTY

Dear Kitty: [illegible] your own answer, I may venture to say that if the little boy had fallen into a big hole in the dark woods he would probably yell [illegible] so there would be no doubt that he was there, too. If he isn't making any noise you may be sure he is still carefully walking along the edge.

Thinks He's Too Good

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I have a boy [illegible] years of age. He is a woman hater and his chum boasts when with fellows how he hates girls and yet, when he sees a pretty girl he always remarks about her beauty. I have formed an opinion that he thinks he is too good for the weaker sex.

G. L.

Dear G. L.: Perhaps the young man isn't as much of a woman hater as he believes himself to be. On the other hand, he may not care for women but still be able to appreciate their beauty, just as he would not care to live on top of a mountain but still admire its majesty and grandeur from afar. I wouldn't waste much time on a confessed woman hater if I were you unless you're one of those born gamblers who can win or lose either way without too much fuss.

Wait For The Girl

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

[illegible] one day she went out on a party to please a friend. I was rather mad and told her not to do it again because if she made a practice of going with other fellows I was through with her. At first she consented and we went along for a week. I went to see her and found her with another fellow and she explained that it was all right but I was rather peeved at what she said. I snubbed her and was mad and said that she wasn't going steady with anyone, not even me. She said she still loved me but not so much. I have [illegible] I hear from some people she has been saying things about me but I don't think she is that kind. My mother said that I should never go with her again after the way she has treated me. Which is the best way, give her up or take her back if she wants to come? Tell me if I [illegible]

[illegible]

Dear [illegible]: [illegible] with the young lady. Of course I do think you [illegible] try to limit her friendship if you are not engaged. On the other hand if the course of true love was running smoothly, she would not care much for the company of others, and certainly would not risk losing your friendship for them. You had best await her decision and if you truly love her, just be a good friend until she makes up her mind.

(Miss Fairfax will be pleased to answer readers' questions regarding love problems which may be troubling them. Write on one side of the paper only.)

How to Keep Well

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

Need of Wise Parents

AT EVERY time in their lives boys and girls need the care and guidance of wise parents. This oversight is particularly important between the ages of ten and sixteen, and even later.

Dr. Copeland

The foundations of physical growth have been laid long before this time. What happens to children and how they take what happens to them at this age of their development may not affect permanently their physical health.

But who can doubt it may determine the way they are going to meet the ups and downs of later life?

Up to the age of 10 or 11 years it is natural for normal children to associate together in unconcerned fashion. But girls will be girls, and boys will be boys. Very soon now the difference between the sexes will be noted.

This is a time when the sex instinct begins to assert itself. The boys and girls need the wisdom and understanding of their parents or other kindly guardian. Wise heads are needed to counsel and guide the children at this critical time. For it is indeed a critical time.

Play and sports are splendid outlets for the superabundant energy developed in these years. Camp life in the out-of-doors has come to be one of the fine institutions for children of this age. In hundreds of camps throughout the country thousands of our boys and girls are under the guidance of wise counselors. They are enjoying properly directed sports and the healthful companionship of other children.

Enough cannot be said of the merit and achievements of the Boy and Girl Scout movements, both in this country and abroad. The very finest leaders are chosen to direct the moral and physical development of millions of boys and girls in the making of future citizens of every nation. What a splendid thing it is!

It is at this period of life that a broader, wholesome interest in the world's doings, past and present, is developed. This should be encouraged. The reading of splendid books of adventure, history and art, biography, sports and animal life are to be highly commended.

On the other hand, it is wise to discourage the reading of morbid tales of crime and adventure of that sort. Wise and gentle counsel should be given on sex matters by the parent or physician.

One of the parent's big jobs is being an intimate associate of a boy or girl at this period. Talk with your child on all subjects. Independence of thought and behavior must be developed. Discourage any morbid sensitiveness or brooding over little affronts and failures or the trivial ups and downs of life. One of the mistakes of adolescence is "to make mountains out of molehills," to take everything too seriously, and the serious ones not serious enough.

To teach a child care of the body and how to act and think wisely takes the patience of Job and the wisdom of Solomon. When any unusual symptom arises in health or behavior it is a good thing to talk to and receive counsel of a competent physician. Many a time such a procedure changes the child's whole future for the better.

The Beauty Box

BY HELEN FOLLETT

A makeshift fingernail shine can be given with the palm of the hand. Even when a lacquer is used, it is advisable to have a preliminary polish with powder or nail cake. Bright Chinese red is a popular color for liquid polishes that keep glimmering for a week or more, purple, green and black are used and, occasionally, one sees a lady at the big date with finger tips of silver or gold.

Beautytoriums are just going in for reducing departments that are becoming more and more popular. Electric horses and jiggle machines are now the joy of gals who are too lazy to clip off a five-mile walk each day. They break down fat cells, and, through vibrations, increase the activities of the liver and intestinal tract. Though curves are in again, they must be kept under restraint. The adipose fighters must continue the old war.

Watch out for pillow wrinkles. The high pillow throws the head to one side and forms lines in the neck. Not only that, but they put up-and-down creases in the cheek. The pillow should be just large enough to allow the head to rest on a straight line with the spinal column. Babies shouldn't have any pillows at all, if they are to grow up straight of form.

Aristotle, who was a wise old boy, said "Personal beauty is a better introduction than any letter." Just what did he mean by personal beauty? Evidently something more than perfection of features and figure. However, we know that good looks oil the wheels of life, make traveling easier. Nowadays anybody can have them. Hygiene and horse sense create them.

Problems of Etiquette

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Thanking Servants for Courtesies

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Is it improper to thank the maid for serving you at the table, when visiting at a friend's home, or the chauffeur, when he opens the car door for you? It seems so thankless to say nothing.

2. When you are well known in a home, is it assuming too much to speak to a new chauffeur, "Good afternoon, Jones," when going for your first drive with your friends?

3. Is it proper for a gentleman to suggest that he sit beside the chauffeur, if the party is too big for the rear seat, or should all arrangements be left to the host or hostess?

PARTICULARS.

1. Since the service at table should go automatically, and since it proceeds while conversation also proceeds, it is usually a bit overdoing things to thank the waitress when she passes the food at the table of a friend's home. Also, so many times does she pass dishes that it would keep us busy thanking her. Perhaps once during the meal we might say a "Thank you" that would be all-inclusive.

2. When the chauffeur opens the door of the car, we do thank him. This is a polite thing to do.

3. If there is possibly room inside the car, he should sit there. If there isn't, probably the host will insist on taking his place on the seat beside the chauffeur. However, it is kind of the gentleman to insist that he take this seat, and I am sure that no one could misinterpret this kind thought.

Congratulations

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My husband and I have a young man friend we used to chum around with before we were married. He has been married and divorced. The other day we received an announcement saying he was married last Saturday. We do not know his bride and didn't know he was planning to be married. Would it be proper to send a gift, or should we just send a card of best wishes or congratulations?

MRS. D. F

Either is correct. It depends on which you wish to do; whether you wish to make an especially friendly gesture and send a gift to register this friendliness, or to be more casual and to send only a note of congratulations and best wishes.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette by readers.)

Falling Hair Treatment

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

"WHAT SHALL I do to stop my hair from falling out?" is a question frequently asked me, and, although I don't promise that the following treatment will be effectual in all cases, it is well worth a fair trial.

Josephine Huddleston

The method I have in mind is a combination of olive oil treatments and tar soap shampoos. Olive oil, as you all know, is highly nutritive and so gives the ducts and glands throughout the scalp the extra nourishment they need, and tar soap has so many advantages it is almost impossible to enumerate them all. The resin or pine extract in tar soap stimulates circulation, from which all hair blessings flow, and it is a most effective disinfectant as well.

Possibly the best plan to follow is the three-day treatment as a preliminary measure and then to carry on twice each week for one month. After that treatment each week may be taken indefinitely and only good results will be obtained.

The olive oil may be heated or used cool, as you prefer, although warm oil penetrates more quickly. However, the oil should not be hot or it is apt to burn the scalp.

By filling a silver spoon with olive oil and then holding a lighted match under it, you can quickly gain the right temperature for the oil and will not heat more than you will use at one time.

By making one long part through the hair before heating the oil you can pour it along the part as soon as it is warm. Then make a second part about one inch from the first one, refill the spoon, and after heating the oil, apply it in the same manner. Continue in this manner until the entire scalp has been liberally covered with warm oil. A five-minute massage should follow to help the oil penetrate quickly and stimulate circulation.

At the end of the massage wrap a clean cloth about the head and let it remain on for an hour. During this time you can be cutting up a bar of tar soap and melting it over a slow fire so that your shampoo will be in liquid form and ready for use by the time the olive oil has finished its work. One average-sized bar of tar soap and one pint of water make a satisfactory liquid shampoo.

Upon removing the cloth from the head saturate a Turkish toweling cloth in very hot water and after wringing it out slightly hold it tightly around the head for a moment or two. Repeat this at least four or five times.

Then pour a liberal amount of the still warm liquid tar soap over the hair and bring it to a full lather. Rinse out the first lather with quite warm water and then bring two or three additional applications of the shampoo to a good lather, rinsing each one out a little, but not thoroughly.

The final rinsing of the hair should begin with warm water, which is gradually allowed to cool until water as cold as it will run from the tap is used. Continue this play of cold water for two or three minutes, as it will close the pores, which have been unduly opened by the hot oil and hot water applications.

As I said before, repeat this three days in succession. Then for one month take two of these treatments each week. By the end of the second week all falling out should have stopped. At the end of two months a new growth of hair should be sufficiently developed for you to see it plainly.

One Who Understands

How brimmed with loveliness the old world gleams
[illegible] clear young eyes and how life's current flows

Nor has he tasted yet the flat, stale brew
That age must drink; but strangely he can feel
How closer, deeper night's sure shadows steal

Though pang of poverty, vast riches' load
Have never touched his days, he knows them all;
And so he's a brother on the road,

Of greater worth than glory, wealth or lands

Elayne, aged three and one-half years, was visiting her grandmother and was very much excited over three little kittens in a basket with the family cat. She immediately inquired as to whether she could have one to take home. Her grandmother told her it was all right if her mother had no objections. That evening Elayne put the vital question to her mother. Mother's reply was "Yes, dear you may have one of the kittens if it is a male."

Next day Elayne appeared at Grandmother's very much elated over the fact she could have a kitten. "Oh, Grannie," she exclaimed, "Mother said I could have a kitten if it was a letter."

Reeser Finds Outlook for Oil Cheerful

Barnsdall Head Optimistic on the Prospects for Rest of This Year

—By M. S. Rukeyser—

New York, Aug. 25—Optimism concerning the outlook for the oil industry for the remainder of the year has been expressed by E. B. Reeser, president of the Barnsdall Corporation, chief executive of the American Petroleum Institute.

M. S. Rukeyser

In a message to this column Mr. Reeser pointed out:

"The outlook for the producing end of the oil industry for the second half of 1930 is exceedingly good. The refining division is putting its house in order, and it is probable that it will show some improvement. The distributing division will not show any improvement.

"The producing branch of the industry has improved its condition in that it is now producing 500,000 barrels less per day than it did a year ago. It is probable that further progress will be made in the curtailment movement. The unitization plan will spread and become a permanent policy of the industry. No changes in the law are necessary to make the contemplated plans effective."

Asked whether present gasoline prices yield a profit, Mr. Reeser said:

"Present gasoline prices do not permit a profit to the refinery. The present depression in refined prices is due more largely to a battle between the smaller independent companies in an attempt on their part to increase the volume of their business. The present prices are below cost. The situation will be corrected as soon as these units realize that the crude situation is strong and that it will cost them more money to replenish their stocks than that at which they are now selling their products."

"We admit that there is great duplication in retail outlets," Mr. Reeser remarked, "and as yet there does not seem to be any remedy for this unfortunate situation."

As for the conservation movement, Mr. Reeser added:

"The conservation movement is 'voluntary' but, nevertheless, it is real and substantial. Present cost for drilling wells positively demand higher prices for crude oil. Producers seem to realize this, and they are, therefore, glad to co-operate in the curtailment movement. There is no danger of an oil shortage during the life of the present generation but higher prices are inevitable."

* * *

"In view of the enormous potential production of both crude oil and gasoline, the industry is indeed fortunate in finding itself in a position where the production of these two products is today fairly well balanced with the demand. Because there is overproduction one is justified in believing that there will be an indefinite continuance and expansion of this conservation movement. The greatest progress toward stabilization in the industry has been made by the producers of crude oil, but in my opinion the good work accomplished there may be undone if it is not followed up with stabilization in the refining and marketing end of the business.

"You ask if there is a needless duplication in retail outlets. From the viewpoint of serving the public, this is absolutely true and yet there seems to be no way by which this may legally be avoided in this highly competitive situation.

"You ask if present gasoline prices allow sufficient profit margin. In my opinion present gasoline prices would allow a very satisfactory profit margin if the industry could realize the enormous saving which could be made through orderly and stabilized refining and marketing. Gasoline is only one product of crude petroleum and while it is a large part of a barrel of crude oil and the most valuable part, at the same time a refiner's margin is what he gets for all the products from a barrel of crude oil as related to his cost for that barrel.

"There are some places where gasoline prices do not afford a sufficient profit margin. Stabilization in refining and marketing, if accomplished, would, I think, quickly correct all such matters and it could be accomplished without any material advance throughout the country in the present gasoline prices to the consumer."

DIVIDENDS ON NEW HAVEN ARE WELL EARNED

Although the New Haven Railroad, of which E. G. At current prices as compared with other carriers New Haven continues to offer an interesting yield.

Vast clam beds abound for miles along the shores in this section. The clams are supposed to be unfit for eating according to Beacon Hill authority, although those can be found so bold as to doubt it. Newburyport has at last followed the example set in "Little Rhody" more than 20 years ago by building a plant self-supporting, where clams under suspicion can be chlorinated and made certainly safe. Perhaps other Bay State sections will follow suit and take advantage of the far-flung beds of clams so long neglected.

"The large metropolitan banks," he pointed out, "with their various departmental facilities have already gone far toward meeting competition in extending credit on the instalment plan. Many of the largest banks have seen fit to add to personal loan departments. Their real estate loan departments take care of real estate loans payable on the instalment plan. Almost any bank in the smaller centers with resources of $1,000,000 or over can arrange to handle instalment loans.

* * *

"The public will welcome the innovation, and this class of business will prove profitable if properly handled. It will go a long way toward solving the question of what to do with surplus funds and will raise the average rate of interest received. It will bring more people into the bank, and bring the bank closer to the community because it is more nearly meeting the demands of the community. Whether we like it or not instalment buying is here to stay, and we might as well make the most of it."

Taxicabs Losing Scottish Patrons

Washington, Aug. 25—Along with similar changes in other [illegible] report from Consul Harold [illegible] Finley, Edinburgh, Scotland, made public by the Department of Commerce. Mr. Finley also reported that taxicabs are losing business.

Motor hackneys and carriages have remained about the same there being 324 in 1924 and 323 in 1930 while motor omnibuses and charabancs have jumped from 335 to 811 in the five-year period.

Millions Ready for Investment

Investment brokers say that when the turn comes in the public psychology of "keeping its dollars in its jeans," millions will enter the investment market. In some instances [illegible] have sold stocks to buy bonds.

English Marconi Ventures Broad

The English Marconi company, before it became a part of the communications system recently merged in Great Britain, was also in many outside ventures, including the rubber business. [illegible] of a really important and paying venture in a new business but this is apt to be the exception.

Canadians Seek New Motor Ban

This may affect American automotive companies. Officials of Windsor and adjoining municipalities have petitioned the Canadian federal government for a ban on importation into Canada of motor cars completely manufactured outside the Dominion as one means of reducing unemployment in Canadian industrial centers. If the proposed embargo were enacted it would be to the detriment of American manufacturers who do not operate manufacturing units within Canada, necessitating construction of new factories by these companies if the valuable Canadian market were not to be lost.

It might work to the benefit, at least temporarily, of the large American producers already manufacturing their Canadian requirements within the Dominion. Automotive employment in the United States might also be affected somewhat although the relations of exports into Canada to total production is small.

Swampscott will receive bids until 7 p. m. August 29 for $100,000 notes, payable December 20, 1930.

NEW HIGH SET IN BOSTON BY R. & A.

Boston & Albany set another new high in Boston Stock Exchange trading today when it advanced fractionally to 191. At the same time new lows were established by Bigelow-Sanford, off 2, and Brown Durrell, down a fraction.

Atchison registered a gain of better than a point, while Boston & Maine prior preferred eased 2. Providence & Worcester jumped 4 at 185, where it was within striking distance of its 1930 high.

Gillette added a gain of [illegible] than 2 points. United Fruit rose over a point. Edison sagged a [illegible]. At the same time Eastern Gas & Fuel lifted a point.

The fact that the wool trade is now on the threshold of the new [illegible] in all the wool-producing countries in the Southern Hemisphere lends special interest in recent press dispatches from Australia to the effect that the position of the wool market there is the strongest in years.

The first sales at auction of the new season will be held Sept. 9 in Perth, western Australia, with the Sydney sales following on Sept. 15 and the first Melbourne sale on Sept. 22. A leading local buyer of foreign wools is of the opinion that the Australian markets will probably open at a lower level, and that this should serve as a helpful factor [illegible]

"The producers are as usual, hopeful that this better demand will result," he added, "and point to the ease with which heavy weights of wool were lifted in the closing few months of last season. Stocks of foreign wool in this country are abnormally low and are held principally by consumers who are expected to have orders shortly for goods that will require their holdings. In the event of any improved demand for goods, it is confidently expected that America will be obliged to import substantial weights of foreign wool."

Utilities Hydro Gain Is Announced

Net gain of Utilities Hydro & Rails Shares Corp. from Nov. 4, 1929, to Aug. 14, 1930, after federal taxes and expenses, and including market value as of Aug. 14 of stock dividends received was $67,542 and after deducting April and July dividends there was a surplus gain of $25,601.

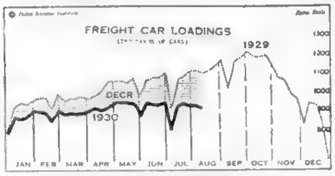
Car Loadings Charted



Total Freight Car Loadings in the United States, by Weeks

By JOHN W. LAIRD
(Irving Fisher Service)

New Haven, Aug. 25—The tendency of freight-car loadings to decline and draw away from the comparable figures for previous years continues. During the last recorded week loadings were more than 17 per cent below those of the same week of 1929, and about 12 per cent below those of the same week of 1928. This year's curve of the railroads' freight business has remained consistently below those of the two preceding years.

Insofar as the rail shipping volume is an index of the country's trade, it seems clear that earlier guesses have gone astray. It will be remembered that this year, while not up to the 1929 records, was going to show a volume of trade "about equal to 1928."

During preceding years the normal trend of car-loadings was quite sharply upward through July and August. This year, until the middle of July, the curve followed that of the two preceding years, though at a lower level.

Since then the curve has turned down and gone lower during three successive weeks. It will take a radical upturn in fall business to bring car-loadings to within ninety per cent of the totals of either 1928 or 1929.

AUTO INDUSTRY VIEW GIVEN

Washington, Aug. 25—Reduction by the automobile industry of production and exports to adjust stocks to sales demand is seen as a constructive development in "Commerce Reports," magazine of the Department of Commerce.

"The industry wisely has made substantial reductions in output, enabling the dealer organization to cut down inventories of both new and used models, and provide a closer relation of stocks on hand to actual sales demand," it states.

"In overseas markets unfavorable economic conditions offered similar difficulties, and automotive exports for first half of 1930, while lower by 44.3 per cent than similar period of last year, have permitted foreign dealer organizations to balance their stocks and place themselves in more favorable financial condition from a competitive standpoint. American factories have encouraged this tendency toward stabilization by exercising close supervision over foreign shipments and endeavoring, as in the domestic market, to maintain export supply in line with demand overseas."

Kreuger Adds Copper Mine Control to Trust Holdings

New York, Aug. 25—The big Swedish match trust continues to grow. A Journal of Commerce Stockholm special says controlling interest in the new Swedish copper mine at Boliden is latest acquisition of Kreuger & Toll, according to information contained annual reports of two subsidiaries of Skandinaviska Kreditaktiebolaget, Sweden's largest banking institution, which formerly backed the mining venture at Boliden. Believed that at least five-sixths of Boliden shares are now held at Kreuger & Toll.

Report of Standard Gas Made Public

New York, Aug. 25—Standard Gas & Electric Co. reports for 12 months ended June 30, 1930, including earnings of subsidiary and affiliated companies only from acquisitions, net of $16,946,654 after federal taxes, interest, depreciation, depletion, preferred dividends of subsidiaries, etc., equivalent, after Standard Gas & Electric Co. preferred dividends to $6.41 a share on 1,841,240 average no-par shares of common outstanding during the year. In preceding 12 months net was $13,574,907, or $6.70 a share on 1,420,552 common shares.

CURB MARKET UTILITIES ARE IN DEMAND

New York, Aug. 25—A new week on the Curb Exchange was ushered in today with the bulls taking the initiative in an effort to extend the gains of the last few days.

Concentrating on utilities, a fair amount of buying held the market on an upward course much of the session, although around midday heaviness developed. Fluctuations were narrow and offerings were well absorbed on recurrent declines.

Oils were more active and an easy tone was in evidence in sympathy with the trend of petroleum issues on the big board. Humble Oil yielded several points, and Cities Service, Standard Oil of Indiana and Standard of Kentucky worked lower.

Electric Bond and Share moved in a range of about two points, with most of the sales at prices above Saturday's final. American Foreign Power warrants were strong, gaining about a point. Missouri Kansas Pipe Line was weak, being in supply about a point lower.

Industrials which were quite active last week were more or less neglected as speculative interest centered in utilities and oils.

Mead Johnson suffered from profit taking on the strength of its 12-point rise in a fortnight. Ford of England was firm. Fokker Aircraft was buoyant. Newmont Mining was well bought.

Trading in Bond Market Slows Up

New York, Aug. 25—The forward movement last week which carried the bond market to a new high level for the year slowed up today. Only nominal interest was displayed in fixed income securities and the general tone was steady. Demand for railroad issues, which was strong last week, slackened. High levels reached in previous sessions were well maintained. Local issues were dull and steady. Union Pacific was an exception, eclipsing its recent new high.

Columbia Pictures Earnings Increase

NEW ENGLAND BUSINESS BUILDERS

$708,000 for Improving Electric Distribution at Portsmouth and Derry

ELECTRIC power, to be attractive to industry, must be as dependable where it is used, as where it is produced. Distribution lines, sub-stations, and transformers are the links between the power house and the factory. This equipment, modern in every respect, distributes electricity throughout Portsmouth and its suburbs.

Under the supervision of the Associated Gas and Electric System group management organizations, and subject to the control of the Board of Directors of the operating companies, the entire distribution system in Portsmouth and Derry has been rebuilt. A new sub-station on the edge of the city of Portsmouth provides dependable service for outlying areas. Sixteen miles of 33,000 volt transmission line have been extended to the Massachusetts State Line and an automatic substation constructed at Derry, adjacent to Portsmouth.

The New England Gas and Electric Association is furnishing millions in New England to provide electric and gas service that will be attractive to new industries. A total of $3,500,000 was expended during 1929 in improvements and extensions of service.

STOCKS MOVE DOWNWARD AFTER SELLING HIGHER

New York, Aug. 25—Pivotal shares moved downward in late trading on the New York Stock Exchange today, after moderate advances had been registered over most of the active list, excluding the oil shares.

The modest bull movement in stock prices was resumed at the start of the new week in the stock market, only to slip up in the selling movement, led by the petroleum issues.

OILS UNSETTLE LIST

After an advance of 1 to 4 points a score of prominent issues during the first period of trading, weakness of the oils unsettled the entire list. The early advance was more than cancelled.

A sharp break in Vanadium, a recent pool favorite, was a contributory factor in the reaction. Pivotal stocks were well supported, however, not far from last week's final levels.

Although declines in the oil shares were mostly limited to a point or two, weakness rapidly spread throughout the list. In the last hour, Goodyear broke more than 6 points to a new low. The loss in aVnadium was more than 5.

Losses of a point or so embraced most of the more active shares, including American Telephone, American Can, U. S. Steel, General Motors, General Electric and Radio.

Such recent strong spots as American Tobacco "B" and Loew's lost 2 points or more. The closing was weak. Trading, however, was light.

During the early rise, Air Reduction, Byers, Eastman, Autostrop, New York Central, Union Pacific and Case, all sold up 3 to 4. Trading was still light and largely represented transactions between floor traders.

HOLDERS DISCOURAGED

Liquidation of the petroleum issues reflected growing discouragement in speculative circles over the industry's earnings prospect, and the progress made at reduction of gasoline stocks. "The Lamp," official organ of Standard of New Jersey, in its issue published today, takes refiners to task for building up huge surplus stocks. Although stocks of gasoline have been reduced to about 40,000,000 barrels, the industry is still overburdened, the publication says.

Weakness of Vanadium followed publication of an analysis indicating reduced earnings for the last half of the year. A large portion of the first half net of $3.30 a share come from security transactions, although the statement did not segregate the amount.

News coming to hand over the week end was meagre, but had its bright spots. The demand for steel and steel products was reported a little more active at Youngstown and Chicago, although trade reports from Pittsburgh were scarcely cheerful. Trade reports from Chicago also indicated some improvement in wholesale and retail buying in the Middle West.

RECOVERY SLIGHT

In Wall Street banking circles, however, there is a tendency to look for only gradual recovery in business, a tendency which restrains investors from buying stocks on advances.

The Guaranty Trust Co., in its monthly survey, published today, says that although business sentiment in some quarters has sunk to depths of pessimism by no means warranted by facts, it must be admitted that any recovery in the near future is likely to be very slight.

In the absence of public buying in the final "holiday week" of the summer, the movements of prices were governed entirely by the swapping and shopping around of professionals, who were about equally arranged on both side of the market. Sales did not cross the 1,000,000 share mark until well along in the third hour.

A three-day shut-down will follow the closing of the market on Friday, and the pre-Labor-Day week is generally regarded as one of the dullest of the year, in business as well as in speculation.

Short selling of United Aircraft blocked the movement in that stock, after an ambitious early start had been made.

VANADIUM'S SHOWING

Operations of the Vanadium Corp. of America in final half are likely to compare unfavorably with first half. July was one of the poorest months experienced, operations for the period being "in the red."

Vanadium did not segragate profit from resale of its stock in first-half income statement. Consequently the exact amount of that profit cannot be determined. It is estimated, however, it exceeded $600,000, being equivalent to $1.58 a share on 378,367 shares.

Net for six months was reported as $1,250,237, or $3.30 a share, against $1,177,688, or $3.12 a share in first six months of 1929. The income statement showed $743,040 profit from other income, representing income from commercial interest and discount, dividends, rent and profit on resale of its own stock. In first half of 1929, 1928 and 1927, other income was $126,388, $106,493 and $83,862, respectively, or an average of slightly more than $100,000.

Vanadium's earnings for first half, including income from securities, held but exclusive of profit on resale of its own stock, evidently were about $650,000, or $1.72 a share.

Some rumors recently indicated Vanadium planned a stock offering to finance developments in the chamical industry. Those probably are without foundation, for the company is strong in working capital, and no immediate expenditures are contemplated that would make it necessary to seek additional capital.

In the commodity markets both wheat and corn sold lower. Cotton steadied on declines of 6 to — points.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

PREFERRED STOCKS

S. F., Boston—I am a salaried man with one dependent. I own my home and have $7,000 in savings banks. I want to buy preferred stocks and shall appreciate your suggestions.

Ans.—Five good preferred stocks would be ten shares each American Water Works & Electric first preferred, General Gas & Electric $7 preferred "A," Jersey Central Power & Light 7 per cent preferred, West Penn Electric 6 per cent preferred and Utilities Power & Light preferred. They will cost less than $5,200 and you will get an annual income of $330, or 6.3 per cent. Keep the rest of your fund in the savings bank as a protection against emergencies.

$7,500 TO INVEST

F. T., Claybourne St.,—I am a salaried man with savings of $7,500. What shall I buy for a better income?

Ans.—Here is a plan for your consideration—$2,000 each Title Guarantee & Trust 5½s and Suffolk Title & Guarantee 5½s; ten shares each New York Steam 6 per cent preferred and Standard Gas & Electric $6 preferred. The total expenditure is approximately $6,000 and you will get a combined annual income of $340. The rest of your fund, left in the bank, should prove a stimulating influence for further savings.

THREE PER CENT

D. O., Boston—I have $2,100 in a savings bank which I want to invest. A friend told me to buy Standard Oil of New Jersey. What is your opinion?

Standard Oil of New Jersey has a good record of earnings and dividends. Current annual regulaa dividend is $1 a share. Extras of 12½ cents a share were paid in each quarter of 1927 and 1928; increased to 25 cents June 15, 1929, since maintained. Earnings in 1929 were $4.75 a share, compared with $3.43 in 1928. At recent levels, however, the yield is about 3 per cent. Inasmuch as you can get 4½ per cent from the savings bank, why disturb your fund? The amount is not too much for emergencies in times like the present.

FOR REGULAR INCOME

D. C., Dewey Sq.—I am a wage-earner and have saved $7,500. I want to invest in stocks, which you may suggest.

Ans.—Buy ten shares each Bangor & Aroostook preferred, Electric Power & Light first preferred, Standard Gas & Electric $6 preferred, Utilities Power & Light preferred and St. Louis-San Francisco preferred. The total expenditure is less than $5,100 and you will get an annual income of $330, or 6½ per cent. Keep the rest of your fund in the savings bank for emergencies, which may arise.

EARNINGS OFF

J. C., Wenham—A friend told me to buy Mack Truck. What is your opinion of the stock? Also, mention latest earnings.

Ans.—In the first six months of current year, Mack Truck earned $2.49 a share contrasted with $5.17 for similar period of 1929. Net for 1929 was $9.05 a share, compared with $7.83 in 1928 and $6.60 in 1927. Current $6 dividend has been paid from 1923. The stock, however, is speculative. Why not give us facts about your circumstances? Have you dependents? How much have you saved?

A GOOD RECORD

L. U., Boston—A friend told me to buy Drug, Inc., for investment?

Ans.—Drug, Inc., organized in 1928 as a holding company, operates the largest chain drug system in the United States, Canada and England. Also it manufactures a number of widely-used medicinal preparations, and recently took over Vick Chemical. Net in 1929 was $6.35 a share, compared with $5.50 in 1928 on a smaller capitalization. Dividends of $1 a share quarterly have been paid on the present stock from June, 1928. At recent levels the yield is 5 per cent. Does that please you? How much do you plan to spend?"

A SPECULATION

B. T., Hampton, N. H.—Would Brunswick-Balke-Collender be a good stock to buy now?

Ans.—Brunswick-Balke-Collender is a speculation. Quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share due Feb. 15, last, was omitted. This rate had been maintained from February, 1927. Operations for 1929 resulted in a deficit of $7.71 a share, compared with a net income of $5.58 a share in 1928 and $3.51 in 1927. If you want to speculate, choose your own medium. Fisher Gives Views About Stock Prices

By IRVING FISHER
Professor of Economics, Yale University

New Haven, Aug. 25, 1930—Was the price level of common stocks too high before the crash of 1929? Will it return to its height before the crash?

Irving Fisher

My daily index of common industrial stocks recorded November 13, 1929, a bottom of 42 per cent below the peak of September 3, with a shrinkage of values on the New York Stock Exchange by $26,000,000.

Nevertheless, in my book, "The Stock Market Crash—and After", written in December, 1929, I expressed the opinion that a sharp increase in the Federal Reserve discount rate between the fall of 1928 and the spring of 1929 would have produced a gradual decline in the peak of stock prices and prevented the crash, adding that prices "would have shown a level, say, 15 per cent below the peak actually attained in September."

My early provisional opinion seems now to be confirmed by the average estimate of 193 presidents of companies out of 825 listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

This estimate, as of July 18, 1930, was elicited by a questionnaire sent by me to the chief executives of all corporations listed on the Exchange. It is to the effect that the level of stock prices before the crash was only about 15 per cent too high.

This is quite different from the popular impression. The general comment during the stock market crash, and thereafter, was to the effect that the level of stock prices had been extravagantly inflated.

CHASTENING NEEDED

Of course there was a great deal of inflation and many of the letters in answer to my questionnaire showed that. One especially vivacious reply I am permitted to reproduce, withholding the name of the writer:

"My personal view is that the slump in the market last fall was a good thing for the country. It cost me money, and was pretty hard on everybody, but I think we were all going a little too fast, were too prosperous, too extravagant, and we needed a little national chastening. One young fellow, a relative of mine, had never been through a panic. He went into business for himself on Wall Street at the start of the great bull market, and made a million dollars. He was so puffed up that there was no living with him. I told him time after time that he was due for a good spanking. He told me I was an old fogy and belonged to a past era, along with the dodo. My answer was to instruct him to sell all of my stocks. I cleaned up, got out and put my money out on call. He stayed in and got beautifully trimmed. One morning he came around, yelling for help. His seat on the Exchange was only worth $350,000. He was surely a rattled young man. Of course, I went down into my jeans, helped him out and now he is all right again, with his fortune just about cut in half. However, I find him a sane person to talk to these days. It was expensive, but it was salutary. The younger generation, especially, need it."

UNDUE INFLATION.

Undoubtedly there was undue speculative inflation of stock prices at the culmination of the long bull market on September 3, 1929. The crash was preceded, accompanied and followed by a business depression. But now that enough time has elapsed for careful appraisal of the situation, the average estimate of men whose seasoned opinion should be heeded, is that the general level of the market at its height was not as much too high as commonly believed.

Analyzing the questionnaire, of the 246 replies from the 825 presidents of listed corporations, I found that 198 were specific enough to be tabulated. The questionnaire was drawn in the form of a secret ballot to be marked, but not signed, so as to insure that the identity of individuals and companies should be unrevealed and to insure that no executive would have any temptation to conceal any weakness of his own company.

This questionnaire had been preceded by a tentative form for criticism only, not to be filled out, in which it was stated that the "essential factor affecting the price of any security is the future earnings."

As basis for discussion it was noted that the future earnings of common stocks, unlike those of preferred stocks or bonds, are unknown. Only their past earnings can be definitely known. When the future earnings are expected to increase, the price of the stock will anticipate this increase and so be higher, relatively to past earnings, than would be justified if there were no such increase expected.

It might be added that there are just three factors which establish stock prices, namely, earnings, chances or risks, and the rate of interest. That is, the various possibilities of future earnings, the respective probabilities that they will be realized, and the rate at which they are discounted determine market price.

CONTRIBUTORY FACTORS

Under these three heads there are, of course, innumerable special causes. Some of these may be mentioned, such as management and policy; the money market conditions; patents, charters and franchises; attitude of government; capital investments, both as to kind and ratio to turnover; reinvestment of earnings; nature and conditions of a particular business, and of business in general; financial structure, including ratio of common stocks to senior securities; provision for depreciation; unused facilities, natural or artificial; risks of enterprise; merger possibilities; inventions, actual and potential, and probable changes in fashion or consumption, physical assets available in case of bankruptcy; amount and distribution of stock outstanding; the "stock-mindedness" of the public, or its speculative urge; dividend history; "scarcity value" of stocks; and market rumors.

But all of these causes fall under one or another of the three categories of earnings, chances or risks, and the rate of interest.

Unemployment Takes Drop in Britain

London special says for first time in many months British unemployment shows slight decrease. Regions showing less unemployment than last month are scattered through counties of Essex, Berkshire, Hertfordshire, Middlesex, Kent, Surrey, Sussex and Hampshire. Total number of workers in these eight counties entitled to unemployment insurance is 1,434,760, and of these only 7 per cent, including all classes of workers, are now idle. This is a material gain over last month. Similar improvement is reported for various London boroughs.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

By FRELING FOSTER

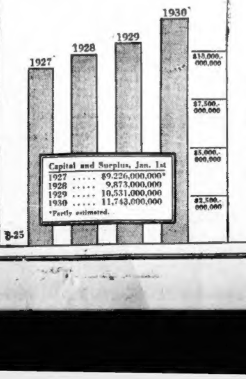
1930 Earnings—305 Large Corporations

Comparison of the capital and surplus and the net earnings of 305 great industrial corporations in the first half of 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930. Figures are corrected for mergers, and exclude railroads, public utilities and financial companies. Earnings are after deductions for all expenses, fixed charges and tax reserves. Source: National City Bank of New York.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS

AS OF JANUARY FIRST

The capital and surplus or net worth of these great corporations grows rapidly due to earnings retained in the business, and to new capital stock issued and sold. Net worth on January 1st, 1930, was 11% higher than 1929, 19% higher than 1928 and 27% higher than 1927.



Capital and Surplus, Jan. 1st
1927	$9,226,000,000*
1928	9,873,000,000
1929	10,531,000,000
1930	11,743,000,000

*Partly estimated.

NET EARNINGS

FIRST SIX MONTHS

1930 earnings were 25% under 1929, 3% under 1928, but 3% over 1927. So they are back to a more normal basis. Moreover they give a return of 5.6% on capital and surplus (which is at the rate of more than 10% for 12 months), thereby showing that these companies still have high earning ability this year.

Net Earnings, First Six Months
1927	$633,000,000*
1928	671,000,000
1929	870,000,000
1930	653,000,000

PORT OF BOSTON IN REVIEW

By CARL MORRISON

Boston stands by contentedly without a protest.

Brigham's analysis of "What's wrong with Boston harbor," has been called to the official attention of such groups as the Port Authority and the Foreign Commerce Club.

President Elwell of the club feels that the organization should study into the points raised by Mr. Brigham and determine how New England can be "sold" on patronizing the Hub port. This problem is also under consideration by the Port Authority and by John T. Scully of the industrial bureau. Scully is interviewing several manufacturers to learn why they prefer New York to their own port.

Mr. Brigham shows an insight into matters at the Army Base terminal, for he makes the comment during a paragraph on general pier conditions:

"Next comes the Army Base, independently operated and upon such terms as may be exacted of shippers and importers."

BOSTONIANS AFLOAT

Sailing from Boston Saturday on the United Fruiter San Bruno, for the tropics on a vagabond cruise, were:

Ralph and Eben Thatcher of Boston, Lester and Amy Morse of Springfield, Edith Love of Boston, Laura E. Blain and Helen C. Brown of Hanover, N. H., Eleanor W. Bowker and Jennie B. Wilkinson of Boston, Sophie, Vivian and Grace M. Speir of Walpole, Lawrence Freeborn of Winchester, Edward P. Farrell of Dorchester, Mary Healy and Mary T. Lynch of Jamaica Plain.

The Karlsruhe of the North German Lloyd line sailed Saturday from Commonwealth Pier for Galway and Bremen. Among the local passengers were:

Mrs. Elsbeth Buedel, widow of Franz Buedel, former attache of the German consulate; Mrs. Marie Fillman of Dorchester, England, returning after visiting Boston relatives; James Conaty of Lynn, Miss Pauline Liesle of Roxbury, Mrs. Dora Goernet of Dorchester, Patrick Greane, Daniel Connolly and Mrs. Connolly, all of Norwood.

Mrs. Karoline Rettig of Wollaston, Mrs. Hedwig Eichhern of Holyoke, Bartley Clancy of Norwood, John J. Keane and Dennis J. Kenney of Boston, Miss Mary McDermott of Dorchester, Mrs. Mary J. Cook of Brighton, Bartley Dillon, John Donahue and Michael McDonough of Boston, Mrs. Walburga Ouelette of Dedham, Mrs. Mary Grealish of Boston.

CUSTOMS BOARDING

Few people realize the multiplicity of duties of the customs boarding officers working in Boston harbor. The writer recently had occasion to use his coast guard cutter pass, by way of following a boarding officer to an incoming foreign vessel.

Some of the duties of William B. Kilner, veteran of 30 years duty, and Michael M. Burke, of 12 years experience, include.

Certifying papers pertaining to crews, cargo, stores, etc., so that the ship may be prepared to start unloading as soon as she arrives at dock; mustering of destitute American seamen, reporting data on shipwrecked sailors, certification of deaths, births, etc.; taking proper steps to dispatch mail, watching for stowaways, or Chinese.

Boston is fortunate in having a group of boarding officers whose thorough, quick work makes detail for a foreign ship a pleasant task, in the opinion of many harborites.

DUE NEXT WEEK

The Canadian Skirmisher of the Canadian merchant marine is due in Boston in a week, from Buenos Aires, with a shipment of bran, by way of the Boston & Maine docks.

MAKES SAFE ARRIVAL

TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

C. C. Patterson

The subject of today's "Who's Who in Boston Harbor" is C. Campbell Patterson, member of the ship brokerage firm of Patterson, Wylde & Co.

"Cam" takes an active interest in boosting the port, through his membership in the Foreign Commerce Club and the Traffic Club. He also holds a membership in the Brookline Country Club, where he has won laurels as a golfer and curling player. He has made several trips to Montreal as a member of tournament teams on this old Scottish game, and is rated one of the keenest curlers in the city.

Patterson's firm, founded by his father and Mr. Wylde, handles some of the oldest British and Dutch lines in marine circles. His company also is agent for the Cosulich line which recently began regular Boston service to Italy.

IMPROVED SERVICE

The Port Authority's campaign to improve service at Commonwealth Pier, had an early manifestation at the arrival and departure Saturday of the Karlsruhe of the North German Lloyd Line. Not only were the passenger lanes systematically roped off, but a general clean-up was noted. The pier at this section was swept carefully, and no cargo was piled near the gangplank.

Lucky Girl

office boy, did his best to torment her. He continued to lay bets that Miss Darrow would be married to the boss before Christmas, and dragged Gordon Moore's name into every conversation.

"Seen the Sheik lately? Who? Oh, you know who I mean. I hear him and Darrow was out on a little party. Didn't you know he was in town? Ain't you going to put up any fight for him? What d'y'let Darrow freeze you out for? Honest, didn't you see him when he was in the office yesterday?"

"No . . . I didn't see him." Sometimes she would ask him when it was that he came, and then Bobbie would go off into fits of roaring, choking guffaws, so that she knew he had been fooling her, and she learned to listen without answering, to smile to show that she did not care.

Rumors, office gossip, the scandals and stories of a big office floated all around her . . . Mr. Farnsworth made forty thousand in the stock market . . , the telephone girl wonet on a week-end with Owen Faber, one of the field engineers, the one with the streak of gray in his hair and the nice eyes. Everybody seemed to know all about it, and about Miss Darrow, trying to marry the boss.

Now that she knew him better, Mr. Farnsworth didn't seem so old to Cathie. She got to picturing him marrying Miss Darrow. . . . Miss Darrow all dressed up in a white gown and veil. . . . Then she blushed, realizing that Mr. Farnsworth was looking at her, and turned away guiltily. She was glad when he finished dictating and she could go back to her desk. It made her feel self-conscious . . . what would he say if he knew what she was thinking?

The door into the big mahogany paneled waiting room was open. Miss Darrow in her new gray tweed sport suit was standing in the doorway, talking to someone.

A man of course. You could tell that by her honeyed accents. Miss Darrow had an entirely separate vocal register that she reserved for men.

Gordon's Return

Well, Cathie wasn't interested in Miss Darrow's conquests. She hardly looked as she passed. All she saw was a pair of long legs, in the corner of the waiting room. A pair of long legs, relaxed, indolent . . . a pair of long legs. . . All of a sudden she knew. Knew before she heard Miss Darrow saying in her sweetest voice, "All right, you can go into Farnsworth's office now He's through with the stenographer. And Gordon—hurry! We've got to start early. Don't let him keep you!"

Gordon . . . Gordon Moore . . . Cathie sat down hastily. She felt just the way she used to feel when she was a child and her mother took her out to Holy Cross cemetery on Sundays, in the crowded, swaying street car, with people and lunch boxes and wilting flowers . . car sick.

Gordon Moore. So he'd come back. Only not to her. To Marsha Darrow, with her new gray sport suit, with the fluttering emerald scarf. And it was true . . . what the office boy said . . .

She Didn't Care

Well, Cathie didn't care. It was nothing to her, nothing at all. She forced a letter-head and carbons into the typewriter. Slowly she turned the pages of her shorthand book. The curves and hooks blurred, rushed together, blurred again.

Miss Darrow, busy with her lipstick, hummed the Meditation from Thais, at her desk.

Cathie began to type, slowly, carefully: "With the Peacock dam nearing completion, and the Tarr-Burtleson irrigation project well under way, we are in a position to consider your problem. We believe that it will be to our mutual advantage—"

Cathie's fingers were cold and wet. She had to stop and wipe them on her handkerchief. Then she bent over her work again. She did not even look up when the outer door opened and Miss Darrow gurgled, "Just one shake, till I get my hat!"

Tomorrow: How Cathie met a serious problem.

The Three Meet

Mr. Bootlegger Has Brought "Jolly Good Times"

Facts justify this cartoon, which will perhaps offend sincere, extreme, ill-informed Prohibitionists, and annoy the large body of PROFESSIONAL Prohibitionists.

When you say that there shall be no liquor sold under government supervision, "Respectability," so called, joins with the Gutter and ignores the Law and the Constitution, and has its pet bootlegger.

HUNDREDS OF MILLIONS A YEAR are made by bootlegging. Under such circumstances, there will be bootlegging and there IS bootlegging.

Bootlegging, born of Prohibition, finances and enriches the crime wave that is the curse of this country.

In the eyes of the law all of its agents are criminals. Bootlegging finances the dangerous and desperate criminal, for it needs "killers" in its wars for public trade, thus building up gangsters and racketeers that have become a menace to safety.

Bootlegging that finances crime, also, AND GENEROUSLY, finances Prohibition.

Nobody is surprised to read the confession of a Seattle bootlegger telling that he subscribed $6000 to the campaign fund that sent an ardent dry, Senator Jones, to the United States Senate.

Senator Jones says he didn't know anything about it, and adds that if his State is tired of Prohibition and votes that way, he will become a Wet Senator instead of a Dry Senator, and vote as the voters tell him to vote.

All that is interesting, but not as important as the confession that a bootlegger gave $6000 to the campaign of one Dry Senator.

How much does the extreme dryness of our legislators reflect the opinions of the voters, and to what extent does it reflect THE INTERESTS, CONTRIBUTIONS AND PROFITS OF PROFESSIONAL BOOTLEGGERS?

Financing of Prohibition with bootleg money is not confined to this country. North of our border in Newfoundland, it was found that Prohibition was generously financed, from small fishing communities.

Fishermen's boats were hired by bootleggers to meet rum ships. Bootleggers, fishermen and owners of boats were prosperous. Why should they not finance Prohibition that made them prosperous? They DID finance it.

In the biggest city, New York, 15,000 to 18,000 saloons have been closed, and more than 40,000 speakeasies have been opened.

Saloons were open to police supervision. Speakeasies are secret. The policemen are found there sometimes, when murders occur, but on a bribery basis.

The saloon was a curse; speakeasies, twice as numerous as saloons, are a GREATER curse.

Before Prohibition came, the professional criminal was a hunted creature, living in the gutter, making a precarious livelihood. Crime offered no attraction to any man able to earn a decent living.

Today the criminal has his house in Florida, his garage full of automobiles, and this is said, unfortunately, without exaggeration. He has on his payroll, policemen, judges, legislators, even "Reformers."

We now have Kings of Crime that operate in millions, as we have Kings of Finance and Industry.

The revenues of organized crime, bootlegging and other crime in this country, is GREATER than the revenue of the national Government.

Well may bootlegging and crime each with a hand on Prohibition's shoulder sing "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

He has brought "Jolly good times" to the criminal and the bootlegger.

But he has brought a SERIOUS PROBLEM to this country.

And it is a problem that will have to be solved.

After Coal, What?

By ARCHIBALD HENDERSON

IN AN economic and industrial era, in a power age, the most important and indispensable factor is energy. As our industrial plants become more numerous and more complicated, as the public demands for power-driven and power-supplied instruments become more intensive and more insatiable, the problem of power supply becomes more acute.

One of the great economic and political problems to come before the American public in the near future is the question of power control. Shall power, the most essential factor in an industrial civilization, fall into the hands of a trust or group of allied trusts? Or shall power remain subject to the direction of a non-partisan board appointed by the government?

No one deeply interested in scientific questions affecting the immediate destiny of civilization can forget the profound impression created by Sir William Ramsay just 20 years ago regarding Great Britain's coal supply.

At a meeting before the British Association for the Advancement of Science this cautious and conservative scientist made a prediction which sounded highly spectacular and alarmist.

In carefully considered words, which somehow bore the suppressed thrill of a prophecy by H. G. Wells or J. B. S. Haldane, Ramsay predicted that Great Britain's coal supply would be exhausted in a century and three-quarters.

At first people doubted this truly sensational pronouncement. Our hard boiled public today always is suspicious that there is a concealed publicity stunt in startling scientific prophecies. But a careful check up on Ramsey's data and calculations showed that his prediction was conservative rather than rash.

England's then world supremacy, on the sea and in industry, was generally recognized as being dependent upon coal.

Far from restricting the coal mined in the British Isles to home consumption, an enormous proportion is sold at a great profit to other (chiefly European) countries.

Actually, England produces about 230,000,000 tons of coal every year. At this ruinous rate of production the supply may be exhausted long before the time set by Sir William Ramsay.

Of course, there are problematic factors in Ramsay's prediction. It is impossible to predict, accurately, the coal measure of the world.

Vast new supplies may be unearthed in ice-covered Antarctica. Nor has it been determined how deep it is possible for the mine to excavate coal at a profit, and how endlessly ramifying the subterranean coal beds are.

But even granting the uncertainty of these factors it is clear that the world is near the end of its coal resources. What can the world do then to supply energy in incalculable amount to do the world's work?

Yet here they stand and the public knows it. Prohibition has no better friends than the Bootlegger, and the Modern Criminal. They owe to Prohibition their undreamed of prosperity. (See Editorial.)

H. G. Wells Writes

ON "THE SCIENCE OF LIFE"

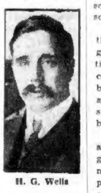
TO RETURN to the axolotl. Axolotls possess a thyroid which contains active hormone, for if engrafted into frog tadpoles it will metamorphose them at once. Why then do they not metamorphose themselves? It seems the axolotl has accentuated one of the peculiarities in which the metamorphosis of tailed amphibians differs from that of tailless.



H. G. Wells

Where in frog tadpoles some hormone is leaking out into the blood from the moment the thyroid begins to secrete in salamanders all or almost all that is manufactured during larval life is stored within the little vesicles of which the gland is composed. Just before metamorphosis, however, the thyroid cells change their appearance, and the secretion is forced out into the blood.

In the axolotl, this final change never occurs; the thyroid cells remain indefinitely in a resting condition, the vesicles distended with an unused secretion. The nature of this "releasing factor" which acts on the thyroids of full-grown salamander tadpoles, but is lacking in axolotls, we do not know.

If we could find out, it would be of great importance, for in [illegible] own thyroids phases of rest [illegible] storage alternate with those [illegible]ctivity and discharge.

[illegible]ubtler differences between tissues are revealed within the simple body of the tadpoles. The destruction of the gills and tail takes place only at the moment of metamorphosis; but the growth of limbs, though also dependent on thyroid, for it is enormously slowed down if the thyroid is cut out, begins from the moment when limb-buds first appear.

This is due to the fact that limb-tissue is sensitive to the least trace of thyroid hormone, while gills and tail do not react until a certain concentration is present.

The transformation of amphibians reveals other interesting secrets. Why is it that while ordinary frogs need almost three months in their metamorphosis, some toads take only a month, some bullfrogs over two years?

The difference seems due to the relative rate of thyroid growth. If it grows fast relatively to the body, the necessary concentration of hormone in the blood will be reached when the animal is small; if its growth is slow, the tadpole's existence will be prolonged.

We can prove this by actually altering the thyroid's relative growth-rate. The thyroid hormone seems to owe many of its properties to the presence in it of iodine in much greater abundance than in any other part of the body. Iodine is very scarce in nature, and the growth of the thyroid is limited by the amount it can pick up.

Give it more than usual, as by emersing tadpoles in weak iodine solution, and it will pick up more, grow faster, and so cause metamorphosis at a lower body-size than usual. And the precocity of metamorphosis is roughly proportional to the strength of the iodine solution.

The thyroid is the main gland concerned with metamorphosis; but the pituitary—the ductless gland that lies under the brain and just over the roof of the mouth—is also essential. In the absence of the pre-pituitary or anterior lobe tadpoles will not metamorphose; and examination shows that their thyroids have failed to grow to a tenth of their normal size.

The pre-pituitary is needed to make the thyroid grow—a striking example of the interlocking action of the different ductless glands. But, in addition, pre-pituitary itself exerts a direct influence upon metamorphosis, injections of it causing even thyroidless animals to transform; it is, however, far less potent than the thyroid. Thus pituitary here reinforces thyroid both directly and indirectly.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Life Is Inside You

LIFE ISN'T outside you—something that is happening TO you. Life is inside you — something that's happening IN you.

Elsie Robinson

All that happens outside you is just so much scenery. Your home is scenery. Your job is scenery. The events of the day are scenery. Even your loved ones are scenery.

These things seem very real to you. You find joy and pride in them. If you were to write your autobiography, you would certainly describe them as your life. But they are not your life. Your real life upon which all your joy or misery depends, is not this procession of outward events. It is YOUR REACTION to such events . . . IT IS THE SECRET STREAM OF CONSCIOUSNESS WITHIN YOU.

Stop a minute. Be still. What do you feel? You feel your shoes—the chair. You hear an automobile—the telephone. You see someone coming into the room. That is a small section of what you casually call your life at all. Wait! Wait until all these surface sensations—all this STATIC—ceases. Now what do you feel?

Slowly, vaguely, you become aware of a stirring, a fumbling—as though someone woke far within you. Then people and places and things drop away. You are removed from them as completely as though you had leaped through space, leaving them behind you on another star. And you become conscious of a tide within you—a vast, jumbled movement of love and hate, dreams and desire, wonder, and rebellion, faith and fear. You recognize that tide. You recognize all the things in that tide, FOR YOU HAVE PUT THEM THERE. Little by little, you have built that tide—AND THAT TIDE IS YOUR LIFE. IT IS ONLY LIFE THAT COUNTS.

Why do you fail so often? Why are you so often disappointed and bewildered? Why are you buffeted about—"at the mercy of fate?" BECAUSE YOU DO NOT REALIZE THAT TRUTH. You do not realize that life is INSIDE you—and that you must build your happiness and wisdom and strength and "luck" INSIDE you. Instead, you think that life lies OUTSIDE you. And you seek, through love and pleasure and work and possessions to find good fortune in that outside life. It can't be done and you're doomed to fury and frustration if you try.

You might as well try to build a home upon the fleeting, unsubstantial vision glimpsed from a car window. For you have no real claim to or control over that outer world. You can't break through into it—it can't break through into you. But you can make that inner life what you wish it to be.

No outside person can make you happy. But you can find happiness INSIDE yourself, if you will put yourself in order. No outside person, however beloved, can conquer your loneliness. But you can find comfort for yourself INSIDE yourself, if you will put yourself in balance. And unless you do put yourself in order all the outside luck won't do you a bit of good. For, though you INHABIT a castle, you'll LIVE in dirt and desolation.

Where First Aid Runs Second

By ARTHUR BAER

RAIN HAS been a vital factor in the progress of man ever since Noah won that boat race by default.

* * *

The farmers have been looking upward toward the rain factory so long that they cannot get their necks back to see what's going on.

* * *

* * *

It didn't rain in June. And it didn't rain in July. There was a slight non-partisan drizzle in the middle of August and the Republican National Committee promptly claimed it on behalf of the administration.

* * *

* * *

Wet or dry, all the clover kickers get out of the crops is the free and untrammeled right of every suburban detourist to assume another mortgage.

* * *

The drouth was longer than an amendment. The result will be increased prices on foodstuffs and adulterants. Milk has already been hyped a cent a quart and we are told that eggs will be reduced nine to a dozen.

* * *

Now, what has rain got to do with the price of eggs? Nobody ever saw a hen drink water. It is afraid of ponds. And when it rains a hen throws itself into high gear and cackles swiftly away from there.

* * *

Nevertheless, eggs will be much dearer this Fall. Wheat, rye, and corn will also be more expensive and the commission merchant under the umbrella will blame it on St. Swithin.

* * *

Suppose it had been the other way round? Instead of drouth for 60 days, there had been rain on a longer promissory note?

* * *

The same results would have been tabulated on the merciless adding machine. The rain would have spoiled the same crops which were ruined by the sun. We must applaud the intelligence of mushroom farmers who raise their product in a dark cellar where commission merchants cannot find them without search warrants.

* * *

The answer to the whole scrambled works is that any excuse is a reason. When the speculators start out to gyp the public they bring their own marked cards. Why don't we declare the farms unconstitutional altogether and rely on canned goods?

* * *

Mr. Coolidge has already solved the problem of relief for the farmer by making his editorials shorter.

* * *

The administration could further the splendid work by eliminating the relief legislation and allowing the embattled ruralites to go back in peace to their checker games.

* * *

This is one year that we have all been relieved with the farmers. Let's all get together in one splendid spurt that will carry us over that last hill to the poorhouse.

(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service.)

In Other Words

AS WE understand it, the government advises the farmer to go in for Tom Thumb wheat farms.

LONG MISSING rain has at last relieved some of the drouth-stricken sections, and yet President Hoover didn't appoint a Rain Finding Commission, so far as we know.

MR. HOOVER'S drouth relief committee is getting organized, and we hope their meetings won't have to be postponed on account of rain.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 25—Diary of a modern Pepys: A note from Tom Geraghty who grows mellow about California "Where cherokee roses play tag with mocking birds." After breakfast perusing my big new Funk & Wagnall's dictionary and admiring my desk of glass and aluminum.

So resolved to keep it clear of debris, which set the household laughing. Then at work picking "Ritz Carlton" out of many of our towels, and Clara Bell Walsh came with her new puppy "Skippy O," a sober-sided Sealyham, and I gave up labor for the day.

In the evening with Rupert Hughes to the Lambs and talked among others to Joe Weber, Lew Fields and Gene Buck and home to find young Clayton Seitz and Miss Barbara Cates, a comely lass. And Clayton is returning to San Francisco before going to London to reside, which I regret.

* * *

New York police whistle quick chirrups when autoists pass a signal. This morning on East 48th street a gorgeous lady in a roadster was halted. The cop waved his hand toward a curb, but she merely waved back merrily and shot away. The officer burst into a mile-wide grin and more such are needed in this all-too-grumpy town.

* * *

Costumers, despite a theatrical slump, are doing a fair business in rentals for dinner parties. Guests representing celebrities is a vogue. One may be outfitted, at prices from $10 to $20, to represent Amos and Andy, Greta Garbo, Helen Morgan, Will Rogers, Ed Wynn, Eddie Cantor, Nazimova, Lily Damita, Mae West and Ganna Walska.

* * *

The most popular is Greta Garbo as Anna Christie. Any thin lady with a long bob in a reddish wig, sweater, skirt and cheap satchel becomes a striking image of the Swedish star. The Garbo influence affects flappers in another way. They talk from their boots in deep bass.

* * *

An ultra-sophisticated magazine, by the way, lists the two most important celebrities in New York of the season as Harry Rosenthal, a pianist who became a successful actor, and Peter Arno, an artist. That's one idea.

* * *

Bowery lodging houses meet competition by employing barkers. They tell of one who cries: "Here you are! Nice clean room 30 cents a night. Good warm bed—man just got out of it."

* * *

It isn't a world-rocking observation but it strikes me 90 per cent of radio announcers—the target for hoots—are as interesting and certainly better mannered than the majority of radio performers.

* * *

The minor passion of a gay flapper who spends evenings cafe-ing is to pencil grotesques and write limericks on white shirt fronts of her boy friends. If anyone protests she leaves in a huff.

* * *

Housekeeping presents problems for the novice. An employment agency yesterday sent a cook. An hour later four little children arrived to announce they "wanted to be with mama." And on top of that some person or one of the dogs has been eating sugar cookies on my bed. O, Mr. Keller!

* * *

They were talking of best remembered movie stars—the penguin-like hops of Chaplin, the startled naivette of Harold Lloyd, the funny falls of Roscoe Arbuckle, the hoydenish gaiety of Mabel Normand and the handsome physique of Wally Reid. But not one mentioned—what dyed-in-wool fans remember most vividly—the slumb[illegible]ous eyes of Valentino.
